

Movie Review:

'3 O'clock High'

by Mark Borrelli

Originally this movie review was supposed to be on a new movie, "Suspect," with Cher and Dennis Quaid, but to tell you the truth, I saw another movie that night and liked it a whole lot better, so I decided to cover "3 O'clock high"

Have you ever had one of those days when things go bad right from the time you roll out of bed. Your alarm doesn't go off and your car has a flat! Well, this is exactly what started to go wrong for Jerry Mitchell, but it got even worse as the day went on.

Upon arriving at school, Jerry gets himself into a bit of trouble when he gets assigned to do a story on a new student. This new student, Buddy Reville, turns out to be a psychopath who has been kicked out of every school he's attended for using too much physical violence. Jerry meets Buddy in the restroom and makes a mistake that ruins the rest of his day; he touches him and Buddy hates to be touched.

Buddy then forces Jerry to fight him after school, at "3 O'clock." Jerry tries everything: he tries bribing someone to beat up Reville, but that doesn't work. So far Jerry, a top notch citizen before the day had started, has become a thief and a delinquent according to the vice-principal. The clock continues to tick down; Jerry tries getting detention, but once again no luck. He tries to escape from school, but Reville has torn the rotor cap out of his mom's station wagon. Jerry's last resort is to pay off Reville to leave him alone, Reville accepts, but called Jerry a wimp. This suddenly transforms Jerry from a wimp to "Rambo," and he decided to face Reville at 3 O'clock high.

If you're expecting to read anymore about the fight, too bad. Go see the movie and find out for yourself, it was worth the money. I will give you one hint on the ending of the movie however. Well, maybe I won't. Just go see it, it's a "thumbs up" movie.
