

Good intentions are hindered by impracticability. The Randall elevator delivers night students to a locked room, rendering the building unaccessible. The elevators are unreliable, says Hoffman. She commented that once she was caught in the elevator for 45 minutes.

Turn stiles turn away handicapped students . . . The only entrance to Norm's is backward through the cashier aisles. That's impossible, explains Hoffman, with the crowds at lunch.

Photos by Beth Coffey

Page design and caption contributions by Lisa Graham and Michael Walker

With the few handicapped designed doors on campus Hoffman often encounters standoffs with pedestrians.

obstacle course in 30 to 1:30 the Rollin'
 challenge the staff to a game to be played en-
 wheelchair.
 one o'clock students
 in groups of four, to in a relay race in good for students to handicapped people are
 and that 'handicap' is d," concluded Hoff-

throom doors, and the

