Rilatos mans Indian program

Richard Rilatos is the Clackamas Community College Indian Counselor -- and a devoted one at that.

Rilatos, a Siletz Indian, was formerly a CCC student and the Indian Outreach Coordinator on campus. When funding from the Siletz Confederated Tribes ran out for his position as coordinator, Rilatos tried to continue work on his own. His job involved finding and identifying Indian families in the community and taking care of their health, educational, and welfare needs.

Rilatos later applied for a position offered by the Native American Rehabilitation Association (NARA), a program which began in April 1970.

NARA, started by a group of Indian alcoholics concerned for their alcoholic brothers and sisters relied entirely upon church and voluntary contributions until June 1971 when the National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse (NIAAA) awarded an initial grant.

Rilatos was hired by NARA for the position of Indian Counselor and is now working at CCC finding Indian families in the community and helping them with drug and alcohol rehabilitation.

Rilatos works for NARA rehabilitating Indians who are alcoholics and has devoted his spare time to working with Indian children. His main concern is to dedicate his time and efforts to help his brothers and sisters wherever help is needed.

Series offers insight

Only $1 per session can gain you insight and knowledge to be the woman you've always wanted to be.

"Focus on Women" is a series of seminars discussing issues of concern to today's woman.

These programs are designed to help women explore their lives, expand their potentials, and establish new career goals.

"For being only the second year of the program, growth has been phenomenal," said Pam Lewis, Community Services Coordinator. Women of all age groups have been participating in the seminars.

There is a $1 charge per session. Special events are free. For more information call 656-2631, ext. 232.
