Board sets levy date, agrees to pact

The Clackamas Community College Board of Education set April 19, 1977, as the date for the college's levy election during their 10 regular meeting.

March 8 was also considered as the date to take the budget to the community. If that date had been selected the college would have had to come up with the 1977-78 budget total by Dec. 20. The Oct. 10 date ends the due date of the budget total to 10.

During executive session, the board also agreed to a new contract for the college's classified employees. The agreement provides for a 7 percent salary increase to all classified personnel as well as a 2.98 percent incentive increase. The new contract also calls for a 1.3 percent increase in college contributions to the classified staff's health and welfare benefits.

Bonnie Nelson, a handicapped art student, reported to the board on student access to campus buildings and as a result the board asked that a survey of architectural barriers be taken.

The complaints go beyond accessibility to locations of campus buildings. According to Nelson, wheelchair-bound students have trouble just opening doors to get into the buildings.

Members of the board responded warmly to Nelson's predicament and are looking to the matter.

Jack White, the billiards player who gave a televised performance at CCC last Friday, is endorsing a billiards product. Ten percent of the royalties he earns from this product will be donated to CCC toward the purchase of a lift until the school has received $2,000.

Len Monroe, Dean of Student Services, suggested to the board that the rest of the money come from the contingency funds.

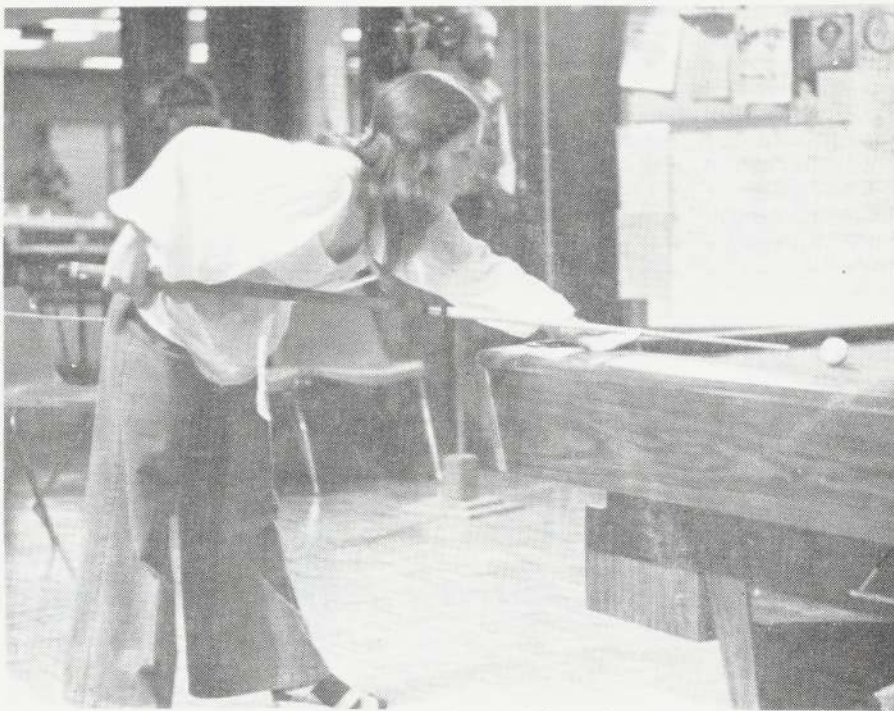

Figuring that each full-time student is worth $1,000 to the school, Monroe was asked if the lift would pay for itself if it encouraged six handicapped students to enroll at CCC.

"Yes, it would," he said, "considering the reimbursement we would receive from the state."

Michael Ayers, president of the Associated Student Government, put a proposal before the board dealing with student participation in future faculty salary negotiations. The board said that they were interested in such a proposal but the proposal would have to meet with the approval of the faculty and student body.

The college has the option of allowing students to sit in on the collective bargaining process.

Cathy Barringer lines up a shot during last week's pool tournament on the CCC campus which solicited participation by more than 200 students. Barringer placed first in the women's division of the tournament. Larry Freeman placed first in the men's division.

Bazaar offers crafts variety

Arts and crafts lovers will have quite a selection of handmade items to admire and buy at the Christmas bazaar being held this weekend.

The Christmas bazaar offers a large variety of crafts including metal sculpture, punched-needle embroidery, copper enamel jewelry, puppets, photographs, macrame and several others.

The Christmas bazaar will be held on Saturday Nov. 20 from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. in the Randall Hall gym.

Craftsmen interested in showing and selling their wares have until Saturday morning to rent a space. Prices for both Saturday and Sunday are $15 without a table and $20 with a table. The tables are 5' x 8'.

The Clackamas Community College Foundation, sponsors of the bazaar, will add the profits to their scholarship fund. Each of the eleven high schools in the CCC district receives a full one year scholarship.

The foundation is a group of citizens interested in the welfare of CCC. Several people from the CCC classified staff and faculty are members of the foundation as well as students and interested people in the community.
