Elevator fund waylaid; Bellavita resigns

Monroe, dean of students, addressed subject of accessibility for handicapped students and Associated Student Government President Michael Ayers announced resignation of Jerry Bellavita as ASG's president during the Dec. 9 meeting.

Other areas covered at the meeting included openings in the student government.

Monroe asked ASG to take into consideration other problem areas for the handicapped besides the problem publicized by Nelson.

Monroe said that a ramp for the Smu-complex would cost from seven to thousand dollars and that similar costs would be expected with an elevator or a lift. He asked ASG to consider making monetary commitment towards a total accessibility program and said that a decision by the college's board of education probably not come until May.

Why is it so hard to get money for an important project? asked student senator Granger during a period of questions asked at Monroe. Monroe's answer was the board has to decide where the prob-lems in the total scheme of priorities at the college.

Bellavita suggested that ASG hold fast to its prior commitment to Smuckers and Granger was chosen by Ayers to head a committee to look into the situation and report up with a list of preferences.

Bellavita, while stepping down as assistant president will still be involved in student government as ASG's representative to the Community Colleges of Oregon Student Association and Commissions (CCOSAC). Ayers listed the qualifications he is looking for in Bellavita's replacement saying that the assistant to the president should have access to and the ability to communicate in every area of the college.

Bellavita will also be available to student government as a resource person and says he will continue to work for what he feels still needs to be worked on at Clackamas Community College.

At this time there are two open positions in the student senate. These positions were previously held by Candice Schwaubauer and Debbie Bottorff.

Is ASG a Mickey Mouse organization? Charlie Bennett, vice president of the Associated Student Government at CCC, and Brad Boyer, business manager, expressed their opinions on certain aspects of ASG meetings. Bennett, Boyer and Debbie Griffin, ASG senator, wore the hats at the Dec. 2 meeting.

Students interested in filling one of these vacancies should contact a member of ASG or show up at the Jan. 13 meeting of ASG.

ASG members will be placing the names of interested students in nomination and ASG will determine how the vacancies are filled.

The two senators of the term were chosen at the meeting under somewhat controversial conditions. Ayers had asked that senators wishing to apply for the honor submit to him a written report detailing what they had worked on during the term that would justify giving them a tuition waiver.

Three senators, Brian Peters, Maureen Kearney and Debby Griffin turned in reports but it was decided at the meeting after some discussion that names could be placed in nomination by fellow senators. This decision allowed the senate to add Kitty Selman, Ken Roberts and Marsha Kunkle to the list of senator of the term hopefuls.

The two senators chosen by the senate as senators of the term were Brian Peters and Kitty Selman.
