CC extends educational services

ckamas Community College recently tted a $94,490 proposal to the Wasco of Education District for purposes of cting educational services.

C's proposed budget document will 65 full time enrolled students and ffer approximately 100 classes. College and non-credit classes will be offered ree areas including transfer, occupaand community education.

lege representatives from Blue Mounommunity College (BMCC), Mt. Hood unity College (MHCC), Portland Com-College (PCC) and CCC were interand PCC and CCC were selected for r consideration.

PCC has not yet submitted the requested budget proposal. The Wasco Board will meet on Monday, May 16 for further evaluation in determining which college to contract

"If contracting with us," said Howard Fryett, assistant to the president, "we ask that a coordinator be hired by their board. We also ask that he spends one full month (July) at CCC to become familiar with policy practices and operations."

CCC's proposal also requests that a Technical Advisory Review Council made up of five CCC employes and two Wasco employes be formed.

The CCC employes will include the registrar, director of counseling, one division chairperson, supervisor of the evening college and assistant to the president.

The Council will meet once or twice per year to act as a consulting group on all major matters to be taken to the Wasco board for consultation.

Fryett said this proposal will be of no cost or benefit to CCC. It will also have no effect on CCC's full-time enrollment (FTE) and will in no way increase or decrease taxes for Clackamas County residents.

"We have a commitment to offer education at the post-secondary level," said Fryett. "Wasco County students do not have educational services and since they border on our district we have some responsibility to make our service available."

The Wasco County students will be registered as CCC students and any assistance needed in admissions, registration, counseling, veterans information and financial aid will be provided by the college.

Classes will begin fall term 1977 and will be held in skills centers, public school buildings and other private buildings in the Dalles, Hood River and other outlying areas of Wasco County.

Fryett said this could be the beginning of a community college in Wasco County. After three years of this program and the supporting vote of the people Wasco County may eventually have its own community college.

I. X, No. 27

Clackamas Community College

Thursday, May 12, 1977

S announces officers

Approximately 90 students voted in the ociated Student Government elections at Clackamas Community College May Michael McCarty became the new ASG sident with a total of 76 votes. McCarty against six write-in candidates. They e: Pete Keep (1), Reggie Latham (2), ry Elting (2), Kim Racel (1), Don Bixler and Steve Buttolph (1).

The office of Vice-President will be held On Bixler who received a total of 38 ss. Jerry Griffin ran against Bixler with close 30 votes. The write-ins for this ition included: Reggie Latham (15), Rob all (2), Steve Shirley (1).

Debbie Schwab is the new ASG secretary er receiving 42 votes. There were also r write-in candidates, Steve Buttolph (2), nise Linck (1), Barbara St. Mary (1) nd Linda Branscomb (1).

Maureen Kearny will be the next business nager. She received a total of 77 votes. write-ins included Brad Boyer with hree votes and Marsha Marzano with one.

Photo by Jenni Wheeler

Clackamas Community College students are being given the opportunity to sample the atmosphere of a foreign country this week as the CCC language department holds its Outdoor Cafes from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, May 9, 11 and 13.

The cafes are being held to stimulate and create an awareness in foreign languages. High school language students from throughout the county have been invited to attend the festivities.

The cafes are being held in front of the Community Center Building and feature folk music, native dishes and dancing.

risbee winner

Leo Morini, a Clackamas Community business major placed among the 15 in the First Annual Intercollegiate isbee Championships held in Evanston, linois last week.

The contest was a culmination of local npus competition available at 956 coland university recreation centers across country. Combined scores in distance accuracy determined place of finish.

Morini and 31 other finalists had won heir campus tournaments and then won at he regional level prior to going to Northstern University in Evanston for the

> GLACKAMAS COMMUNITY COLLEGE ARCHIVES

