CCC goes to four-day summer week

Administrators at Clackamas Community College have announced that the college will initiate a four-day work week this summer. The shift to shorter hours is part of a plan in meeting the demand of energy conservation.

An energy task force at CCC, started by President Hakanson, has studied the total college operation relative to energy consumption. They found that the college is using approximately 350,000 kilowatt hours of electricity per month, costing about $100,000.

The group also found that a significant energy savings could be achieved by either eliminating activity or by changing the mode of operations. The task force decided to choose the later and switch from a five-day to a four-day work week for the summer.

It is estimated that such a shift would bring about a 42,000 kilowatt hours savings per month or about 12 per cent of the monthly energy consumption. The change will begin June 13 and conclude September 2.

Discussions of the plan have been held with appropriate staff organizations, Union Local 2832, and the Clackamas Community College Educational Association (CCCEA). No objections have been raised to the plan.

Total working hours of support staff and their immediate supervisor would be arranged so as to best serve students and clients. Offices will still be open to serve the community but most of them will have a minimum of one staff person available from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Recreational facilities will be scheduled for use seven days a week and a recreational supervisor and custodian will be on duty when these facilities are in use. Security staff would be on duty as usual serving the college seven days a week.

A Code-A-Phone device will be installed with a recorded message explaining the summer Friday closure for energy conservation reasons.

It is anticipated that college service will not be diminished under this plan and that a significant energy savings will be accomplished.

Senior citizens day scheduled for May 24

May has been declared "Older Americans Month" to honor senior citizens who often lead lonely, empty lives. To help keep them active and involved the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) plans many activities.

Among these activities is a special May celebration to be held Tuesday, May 24, from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at Clackamas Community College. The senior citizens day is being sponsored by RSVP, CCC, Clackamas County Senior Citizens Council, Lake Oswego Adult Community Center, Oregon City and Sandy Senior Centers and all area Loaves and Fishes Centers.

The event has been titled "Lei Day" and a Hawaiian luau will be one of the main features. Cost of the luau is $1 and tickets are available at local senior centers. Tickets will also be available to seniors at the registration table on May 24.

The event has been scheduled to take place in the college's outdoor courtyard between Randall and McLoughlin Hall.

RSVP coordinator, Judy Smith, said all senior citizens of Clackamas County are welcome to come and it will be an open day for seniors to come and go as they please.

"All persons attending are invited to wear Hawaiian costumes," said Smith.

Among the events scheduled for the day are health screening activities such as blood pressure checks through CCC nurse Bonnie Hartley, a bingo game with cash prizes and information booths.

A folk dance workshop will also be featured and dancers will demonstrate and teach.

Senior citizens will have the opportunity to participate in a theatre or art workshop.

Auto emissions testing will be furnished by CCC automotive department and entertainment will be provided throughout the day.

Craft sales will also be a feature of the event and any person who would like to sell handmade crafts should contact Judy Smith at 656-2631, ext. 317 to reserve a table. "Interested art students could possibly sell paintings," said Smith.

To top the day off a dance with a live band will be featured. The dance will begin at 4 p.m. and continue until 5:30 p.m.

Senior citizens who need transportation may call their local senior center or Loaves and Fishes center or contact Kelly Howell at 655-8640 or 1-800-452-6382, ext. 640.

Video department students finding employment success

The Video Department at Clackamas Community College is turning out students who are having no problem in finding successful positions.

"The reason is that at CCC, the students are trained for technical and production areas, whereas many schools train only for production," said Norm Herman, head instructor of the department.

For the last three years there have been more jobs available than students to fill them. This is not the case at other schools who do not have the technical training that is offered at CCC.

Van Faulk, a 1976 CCC graduate, has been assigned to become a member of the White House Communications Department's Video Staff. Tom Hopkins, CCC graduate, is a film editor, and Milt Ritter, another graduate is a news cameraman for KOIN, Channel 2 TV in Portland.

"Although cable TV is still in the infant stage, it is steadily increasing, and this will mean more jobs directly involved with transmission, distribution, production, and developing programs material, plus many more jobs in the design and supply end," said Herman.

"We hope next year to have more women enrolled in the Video department as women tend to push the production part while a class of men will often make the class entirely technical," he said.

The video department works with the school in areas such as speech, drama, psychology, nursing and other departments by videotaping speakers, skits and other teaching aids.
