

Journalism classes focus on Estacada

Two journalism classes at Clackamas Community College have combined forces in a publication unique to the program.

Students have tried to capture in words and on film pertinent information and interesting stories about the industry, life and the city of Estacada.

Students in Newspaper Editing and Design (J 218) and Photojournalism (J 134) will be publishing the special "mini-publication" on the town. The edition will be distributed to the college with the June 2 issue of the Cougar Print.

Editor of the issue is Cindy R. sophomore in journalism from Estacada. Photo editor is Reggie Latham, a student in video technology. Fran Dutton, an arts student, is production manager.

The students and their instructors, Clark and Randy Wood, spent a day in the city completing interviews and taking photographs. Clark hopes that the journal will be undertaken each year focusing on a different local town.
