

This candid shot of Adviser Linda Vogt (left, with Photographer Jillian Porter) proves that nobody is safe in this office.

News Editor Briane C. Dotson was always hard at work tracking down a story.

Understanding what some of us were thinking was often confusing. Tara Powers shows proof of that.

Editor recognizes staff in last column

We've all gone through a year of trials and tribulations, but now the year is completed.

I've had fun this year as editor, and as this is my last column for The Clackamas Print, I want to recall on my three years at Clackamas Community College.

In the last three years, I and this newspaper have been through an advisor change, three editor changes, several section editor changes, an absolute plethora of staff members, seven front-page design alterations, and a name change.

I'd like to focus my attention on this last column, on my staff.

CAREE HUSSEY (let's go home): CAREE is a two-year veteran of this newspaper staff, and provided consistent help with the details which can make running a weekly paper difficult.

JIM TITUS (Mr. Excitement): Jim, next year's editor, rarely spoke, but when he did, we almost wished that he wouldn't have.

ROSEANN WENTWORTH (That's Incredible): The only person I know who can change her clothes while driving a car from Oregon City to Lake Oswego--without having to stop at lights.

BRIANE C. DOTSON (Mr. Optimistic): Whenever I could interrupt Briane's conversations with himself, I could always count on him for a unique opinion on things. But, don't call him Brain!?

JULIE CHURCH (Miss Cute): Responsible for the photo department of the paper this year, she is the only other veteran staff member who is "completely retiring" at the end of the year.

MARK BORRELLI (Bo-Bo): If I had a most likely vote to give, it would be to Mark; Most likely to be a greeter at Clackamas sporting events. Oh Hello.

RICK PILLER (Mr. Conservative): Kcir Rellip is his name spelled backward, but that doesn't mean anything. No real joke here, that's just an observation. Faith, are you still reading?

ANGELA WILSON (Wilson Angela): Regardless of what you have done this year, your last name still begins with "W." It shall remain that way throughout eternity.

MICHELLE WALCH (Our "way out" editorial staff member): In some peculiar, demented way, I now know what she meant when she said "we're all going to hell."

JILLIAN PORTER (Miss Innocent): As Letterman would say, one fabulous babe, capable of setting you straight--when the time is wrong.

TARA POWERS (Miss Loud): I think you'll agree, it doesn't really matter who has the "#1 eyes," "#2 arms," "#1 chest," or "#1 lips." Although, maybe on the other hand, it does.

S T A C I BEARD (Miss organized): I don't really have time right now to comment... I'm very busy.

TIM JONES (Mr. Vice President): From politician to reporter to politician and the ASG vice presidency, you've made several "mature choices."

DAN FULTON (Big Guy): I'll always remember, we have the Dayton Leroy Rogers story--Just in case.

AMBER CORDRY (Duck): If I could say any one thing, I would. But, I can't; so I won't.

LINDA (apostrophe) VOGT (pronounced "Vote"): I still think you should run for political office. Then we could say "Vote for Vogt." The John Denver music is out, okay? And, at this point in time, I can safely say: I do know where the athletic office is.

I'm sure I left out some staff members who were here this year, but I'm sure they're not complaining.

I would like to say goodbye for the year to everyone--my staff as well as the college. Goodbye. Goodbye this.

Christopher L. Curran

Photo Editor Julie Church, comfortable only behind the camera, gets a taste of her own medicine.

