Denny Smith took time out of his campaign to speak in John Rau's American Government class last Friday. Smith answered several questions during the hour, some of which were concerning the timber issue and abortion.

Congressman Smith addresses students

Congressman Denny Smith was on campus Friday, Nov. 2, to address John Rau's American Government class.

The main issues Smith discussed were the current national budget problems, his support of the timber industry and the movement of U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia. He also had time for a question and answer session.

When discussing the national budget, Smith said he did not support the current spending plan.

"You will get the tax increases, and I don't think we need those," he said. "Nobody won except the big spenders."

Smith wore a yellow ribbon on his suit in support of the timber industry.

"I'm not a forester; I don't know much about it," began Smith. "I do know that we can continue to harvest forever if we're allowed to."

"I don't think you need to hurt people in the name of protecting the environment," he continued. "We need to be able to provide a good supply of timber."

Smith went on to explain that the current laws require foresters to replant when they harvest timber. He also mentioned that Oregon depends on the tax revenues from the industry to help support the state.

"Look at the timber industry as property tax relief," he said.

Smith said he supports a declaration of war on Iraq if fighting begins in the desert.

"This is something we're really weighing very carefully," said Smith. "We don't have a situation where we're worried about the Soviets as opponents."

"I do know that we can continue to harvest forever... I don't think you need to hurt people in the name of protecting the environment."

Another issue that was mentioned is Smith's pro-life stance.

"I do not think abortion should be contraception upon demand, which is what it has become in many parts of the country," he said.

"Somewhere along the line, a couple has made a choice," he elaborated when asked if a woman should have the right to choose an abortion.

Smith ended with a reminder that the election was Nov. 6 and he would appreciate the votes.

"I've made a career in government over the last 10 years trying to get at things that were not right," he said.

Fasten your seat-belts...

1990 Election results are in

Prepare to fasten your seat-belts on the way to school from now on, or receive a fine of up to $50. As of 11 p.m. last night, Ballot Measure 9, requiring the use of safety belts by adults, was passing, with 54 percent of the voters in favor and 46 percent against, in 36 percent of Oregon's voting precincts.

Also passing at press-time were Ballot Measures 1, 2, 5, 7, and 11. However, Ballot Measures 3, 4, 6, 8, and 10 were failing.

Ballot Measure 4, the measure proposing the shutdown of Trojan nuclear power plant, was failing with 61 percent voting no and 39 percent voting yes, with 45 percent of the precincts reporting.

Ballot Measure 5, limiting property taxes for school and government operations, was passing with 52 percent opposed and 48 percent in favor, with 45 percent of the precincts reporting.

Ballot Measure 6, proposing new recycling standards for product packaging, was failing, with 59 percent of the voters opposed and 41 percent in favor, after 36 percent of the precincts had reported.

Ballot Measure 8, the constitutional amendment to outlaw most abortions in this state, was failing with 68 percent of the votes against and 32 percent in favor, with 50 percent of the precincts reporting.

Ballot Measure 11, proposing tax credits for education outside public schools was failing with 69 percent against and 31 percent in favor, with 37 percent of the precincts reporting.

Scholarships available to students

Several scholarships for currently enrolled students are being offered through Clackamas' Financial Aid office.

The scholarships are offered for a wide range of areas, from ornamental horticulture to an outstanding student.

One of the major scholarships consist of a required 800 word essay, such as the Harry S. Truman scholarship. This particular one is for any transferring student who is committed to public service.

The Outstanding Sophomore tuition waiver is designed to recognize and encourage academic achievement of sophomore students. The tuition waiver is based on a 2.5 GPA, grades, transcripts, and two letters of reference. The recipient must make a speech at an annual scholarship recognition ceremony.

The American Water Works Association scholarship awards $500 to a student enrolled in college courses leading to a two-year associates degree in water works operation and management.

The Ellice T. Johnston scholarship awards $500 to a student with two years of college. The purpose of this scholarship is to further the education of a student in ceramic art. The application process consists of a portfolio of work, two letters of recommendation, and a Financial Aid Form (FAF) or a 1040 Tax form from the previous year. It also required a letter of intent of the use of the scholarship and an academic transcript.

Still another scholarship is awarded to a student who expects to graduate this year with an associates of arts, science or applied science degree. The student must currently have a cumulative GPA of 3.25. This scholarship for the Academic All American Team for community, technical and junior college scholarship requires a 500 word essay.

The Financial Aid office has all these applications and more for any student who may be interested.

Professionals offer advice about career fields

The Career Market is today in the Community Center Mall from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. The Career Market is designed to help students make informed career decisions, according to coordinator Gail Laferriere. Approximately, 70 professionals from a variety of career fields will be on hand to give advice and information and answer any questions students may have concerning their fields. This Pontiac Fiero, parked in front of the Community Center, is being used as a display and advertisement for the Career Market.
