

'Years' impossible to pass up

The theatre department will be performing their gift for the college's "More Alive at 25" on May 16-18, May 31, June 1 at 8 p.m. and June 2 at 2:30 p.m. The Impossible Years is a play that was on Broadway in 1966, 25 years ago, and the theatre department thought that it would be a good gift to give to the college as it celebrates its 25 year anniversary.

Best friends portray foes

When two best friends get together to do a play, something interesting happens. Kathy Clapp and Alexandra Ferguson, under the direction of Adam Jarvey, will be performing in Ludlow Fair on May 30 at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m.

"It's about the relationship of two girls who share an apartment," said Jarvey.

Clapp and Ferguson decided that because they were best friends that they'd like to do something together. At times doing a show with a best friend can be difficult.

"I get the urge to hit her. But I only want to hit her when I'm in character. After all, she's my best friend; she knows everything about me," commented Ferguson.

They have had the opportunity to learn a lot of new things in this show.

"We got to learn how to smoke," said Ferguson.

Each character has his or her own problem in this show.

"My character has a man problem," said Ferguson.

Klapp has a character that creates her own problem.

"My character is just convinced that she has a lousy life," said Klapp.

The two girls play opposites and they feel that the play is similar to Trout, only with women. The fact that it is women in the play brings a whole new concept to the story line.

"They chose me to be an outside eye," said Jarvey. "They chose the play and asked me to direct it."

The play is a lot like a relationship played out on the stage.

According to Ferguson "It's great, a really good show."
