'Open Mike' provides opportunity, recognition for writers, musicians

by Melissa Freels
 Co-Editor-in-Chief

Poems and short stories are scattered across the long table. Notebooks and briefcases packed full of literature sit nearby. Poetry books (including one by Russian author Yevgeny Yevtushenko) accompany The Oregonian's A & E section on the table, while a guitar sits on another table nearby.

Welcome to "Open Mike."
 "Open Mike" is a weekly event sponsored by CCC's Writers' Club. Every Friday, from 5:15 to 7 p.m., people gather at Oregon City Subbs on Main Street in Oregon City.

Some people come to share their creative writing, while others simply come to listen. People often bring work from their favorite authors and share it with the group. In addition, information about local literary events is shared.

At the April 24 session of "Open Mike," Jan Zittleman, the President of the Writers' Club, read a humorous essay that she had written. It was titled, "If I Knew You Were Coming, I'd a Baked a Cake," and it was about a woman who baked a beautiful "Barbie Doll" cake for a birthday party. The woman had set the cake on top of her car and then drove off, forgetting about the cake! After Zittleman read her essay, the others at "Open Mike" offered suggestions and made comments concerning the essay.

Zittleman also read "Bounty" at the session. "Bounty" is a poem by Mt. Hood C.C. English Instruc-

Malcolm Boswell, a former CCC student and former Vice President of the Writers' Club, attended the April 24 session. He read a poem titled, "I Explain Some Things," written by a poet during the Spanish Revolution. First, Boswell read the poem in Spanish, then he translated it to English.

Another writer, who prefers to go by his pen name "Montford," read "Onions." "Onions" won second place in the fiction category in the 1992 Writers' Club Writing Contest.

"We want to expand it and invite people who just want to come and listen. The bigger the audience, the more fun it is."

tor Sandra Williams, who had participated in a poetry reading at CCC just two days before.

"Open Mike" also appeals to writers who are not CCC students.

Clackamas competes for IBM grant

by Maurice Glenn
 Staff Writer

CCC has applied for a one million dollar IBM grant, the first application in school history. The grant is to be used to cover three major areas.

1. Fundamental Curriculum.
2. Applied Research.
3. Institutional application of total equality management.

A task force consisting of CCC faculty, administrators and classified staff, headed by Marsha Coker, is working in behalf of the school towards receiving the grant.

Coker said, "Competition is really stiff for the grant. CCC not only has to compete with other community colleges, but also four-year schools." This is the first time that the college has applied for the grant. On Oct. 1, 1992, the school that wins the grant will be announced.
