Cougar wrestlers defeat Lutes in Tacoma, go on to perform well at tourney in Yakima

by Nicole Turley

The Clackamas wrestling team walked away from last week's competition in Tacoma and Yakima, Wash., with a number of individual and team awards.

On Nov. 17, the Cougars defeated Pacific Lutheran 25-17. Clackamas was behind going into the last three of the ten matches until they made a strong comeback.

"We were behind going into the last three matches," said Head Coach Mike Haluska. But pins by Jamie Dixon and Adam Reese gave the Cougars the win.

"We lost a lot of matches in the lower weights," Haluska said. But even in the matches that the team lost, everyone performed well and gave the team enough points to make a come back possible, Haluska said. "They all did real well."

Next on the agenda was the tournament on Nov. 20 in Yakima. The team, with 35 competitors, raked in a number of individual honors, collecting several firsts, seconds, thirds and fourths.

Fourth-place honors were won by Derek Puckett and Adam Reynolds in their weight classes. Travis Rollins and Dan Punzell shared third place in their weight. Jake Whisenhunt, Arron Burdick and Chad Mitchell took second place in their divisions. And Sam Federico and Scott Villestrigo shared first place in their weight class, as did Jason Marshall and Nate Sullivan.

"There was no team score, but we did real well," Haluska said. Haluska added that though there were a couple of injuries, those were probably the only bad things that happened during the tournament. "I was really pleased with the tournament, besides the injuries," Haluska concluded.

Runner Hickey takes school in stride

by Cindy Wilcox
Contributing Writer

Mike Hickey is a known name when it comes to sports at Clackamas. He is, after all, involved in a number of them. But with all that keeping him busy, he has still managed to keep a high GPA and an even better attitude.

Hickey came to Clackamas from Hudsons Bay High School in Washington. Why did he choose Clackamas? Actually he didn't; Clackamas chose him.

"I was kind of recruited by Coach (Mike)Hodges," he explained. He also received two cross country and one wrestling scholarship.

Hickey has played just about any sport one could imagine throughout high school and college. His freshman year in high school, he wrestled and played football and baseball. Not all of these got him very far, though. "I realized I was too small for football," he admitted.

His junior year, he began running cross country to prepare himself for wrestling, and he was kind of "a natural."

Although he loves baseball, he quit his junior year to run track.

"My coaches talked me into it," Hickey said. From that point on, he stuck with wrestling, track and cross country.

Although Hickey was keeping busy being a tri-athlete, he was somehow able to pull off a 3.0 grade point with an average of 15 credit hours a term. "I had maybe an hour of study for each hour of class," Hickey said. He admitted that this was all quite exhausting, though.

I felt burned out plenty of times towards the end of the term. I tried to find something to motivate myself. - Mike Hickey

"I felt burnt out plenty of times toward the end of the term. I tried to find something to motivate myself," he said.

These motivations usually consisted of thinking about his goals and heroes. His top "heroes" are Steve Prefontaine and Vince Lombardi and his number-one goal is to "be an All-American in an NCAA Division One program."

This year he isn't taking on quite as many sports, but he has good reason. He is still running track and cross country, but he said that with taking even more credit hours this year, it would probably be in his best interest to get out of wrestling. He also said he wants to focus more on his running, pointing out that in order to play sports at a college level, he must train all year.

And even though he will stick with running both cross country and track, Hickey said he likes cross country better because he hates "running in circles."

Hickey also gave himself a little time for fun. "I think I have a pretty good social life."

Hickey's future looks pretty bright. He plans to go to a four-year school and is "looking forward to at least a partial scholarship" in sports. He is not absolute about what he wants to do for his career, but said he is leaning toward coaching. "I'd like to coach a college level sport like cross country or track."

Hickey contributes his success to his grandma, who is always there to watch him run and motivate him, and to the men who trained him.

"I think I've been pretty fortunate because I've had two excellent coaches," Hickey concluded.
