Grant to improve OATC

by Troy Blackledge
The Print Staff

Behold! The future of education cometh to CCC-Wilsonville.

The possibilities of fiber-optic linkage and microwave TV reception are scheduled to become a part of the educational experience at Oregon Advanced Technology Center. Soon, Wilsonville's capability for educating will be expanded to two-way, interactive telecourses from around the country.

This technology will provide for an information "sharing" between institutions around the country, greatly expanding the number of classes our institution is capable of teaching. If OATC wished to teach a class in Machining Fundamentals X, for instance, yet they weren't properly equipped, all they would have to do is contact the appropriate school and participate in their classes via the two-way TV link.

This vast resource is brought to us by the CCC Foundation board, a group of volunteers who raise money for various programs and projects the school is interested in pursuing. The ongoing campaign to equip and furnish the Wilsonville campus is nearing completion, thanks to The Murdock Trust's Challenge Grant.

The Foundation made a proposal to Murdock Trust to provide a grant of $136,000 toward technological advancement at the OATC, particularly for two computer labs, microwave television access and a fiber-optic distance learner system, "all of it the newest technology for distance learning," according to Corky Kirkpatrick, director of grants and special projects.

Unaccustomed to such a large grant proposal from a community college, Murdock Trust opted for the cautious approach; if our school raised half of the desired grant, or $68,000 from other contributors, and maintained the proposed equipment improvements, they would indeed match the accumulated half with a gift of $68,000. The Foundation raised the needed half, thanks to generous support from the private sector, and largely to the contribution of Larry Cole, director of Canby Telephone/North Willamette Telecom, who provided the distance fiber-optic link to the school.

"The promotion of technical advancement in Clackamas County" is the bottom line, according to the Foundation's president, David Dickson. "Companies demonstrate a keen interest in OATC because our programs are better suited to training workers for the smaller, more local industries of Clackamas County," he said. These improvements at Wilsonville will likely improve the reputation of the technical schooling and eventually employ more people residing in Clackamas County.

Today's students will probably miss out on the improved technology. Two years is the expected development span, according to Kirkpatrick with "fiber-optic linkage in the fall."

Memory Hints: When was the War of 1812?

by Jeff Kemp
The Print Co-Editor-in-Chief

Fortunately for all of The Print's readers I am currently enrolled in Psychology 142/Personal Development and College Success. For the next eight weeks I will attempt to share with you the knowledge that I believe every college student can benefit from. The courses text, "Becoming a Master Student" by Dave Ellis, offers students an excellent balance of tools, techniques, hints, illustrations and suggestions for becoming a successful college student.

I will be setting up a top-five list to summarize some of Ellis's most important and pertinent chapters. Hopefully a few of you can benefit from the knowledge that I will be obtaining from this class.

Helpful Memory Hints:

1. Use your body that's what it is there for. More people learn by doing.
2. Dress for the occasion. It's true folks, wearing the same outfit to study in can help you feel more comfortable with your surroundings in class the next day.

3. Listen to your inner voice. If you're trying to study and your mind keeps wandering, draw or write whatever it is your thinking. It helps clear your mind.

4. Record difficult reading. Having trouble memorizing vocabulary? Put your voice on tape and listen to it in the car or while laying in bed. You only have to read it once!

5. Be productive in the morning. Even if you hate to get up before noon like I do, that's when your memory is sharpest.
