Profile: Students honored at graduation

Besides school, Hiransonboon works as a salesperson for Beaverton Honda.

What he says has been a big challenge to overcome at Clackamas is balancing all these activities.

"Debate required huge amounts of my time beyond what was done in class. As captain of the team, I tried to keep research and case development moving forward at all times. This required an additional ten hours weekly. I also worked full time at Beaverton Honda/Yamaha selling landscape maintenance equipment. School required efficient use of time and hard work," Hiransonboom said.

Next fall he plans to attend either the University of Oregon or Portland State University and earn a BA in political science, with a minor in Sociology. Then he hopes to go on to earn a Master's in Urban Policy.

"I would like to help research and develop public policy, which addresses the needs of the nation's educational systems, particularly K-12 in the inner cities," Hiransonboom said.

Another profile student, 19-year-old Heidi Boring, a graduate of North Clackamas Christian School, has also found Clackamas to be very inspirational.

"I have known many CCC students and faculty and have heard many positive things about the programs at CCC," she stated in her personal history questionnaire.

Boring began at CCC in September of 1992, and will be graduating with an Associate of Science in General studies in Science.

She has been able to maintain a 3.9 GPA, while participating in a number of activities. She is a physics tutor and a member of the Clackamas Chapter of the honor society for 2-year colleges, Phi Theta Kappa. Along with that, she is a member of the leadership committee of Baptist Student ministries. Recently Boring, along with other CCC students, went on an educational field trip in Malheur, Oregon.

Besides school-related activities, Boring has been a childcare provider for 2 families, working 5 days a week and 8 hours a day.

One only needs to look at her amazing high school record to see that it is no surprise she is a success at CCC. She earned a 3.96 high school GPA and was a member of the drama club, student council and school choir. She also received a varsity letter for being a statistician for volleyball and basketball.

This summer, she will volunteer at Kaiser Permanente in the Physical Therapy department. Eventually, she plans to attend Pacific University and graduate from their Physical Therapy program.

"I love being with and working with children," she said. "After I obtain a license in physical therapy, I would like to focus on helping children," Boring concluded.
