Political Science Instructor Dean Darris

by Anjanette Booth
 News Editor

Dean Darris, the new political science instructor, is a firm believer that the youth of today need to educate themselves on political matters to have future success.

"I'm not a Democrat or a Republican. I'm an independent citizen who is deeply concerned about the community," Darris said about his reasons for teaching political science. Darris would like to remove the fear from the discipline, to encourage more students to enroll in the political science course.

Darris's experience in the political world began as a law clerk for the state of Oregon. He moved into teaching from there, at institutions such as Marlyhurst, Mount Hood Community College and Chemeketa. Now at Clackamas, Darris hopes to work with the Political Science department to expand the program to include political theory, international relations and comparative politics with American government.

German Instructor Dick Stones

Dick Stones, a new full-time German instructor, feels fortunate to be part of the growing Foreign Language department at the college.

"I tell my students that German is easy," said Stone on German's parallels to the English language. Stone likes to set a relaxed atmosphere in his classroom, where students feel comfortable and natural about learning a foreign language. He feels a language is not just cut and dried; more than grammar needs to be stressed.

Stones' goal is to get his students to speak and learn as much about Germany and its people as possible within a two-year setting.

He stresses to his students that they need to learn not just the language but the culture to get the total picture.

Stones' past experiences in teaching include assistant professor at Idaho State University, teaching assistant at Brigham Young University and Instructor at the University of Alaska.

Nursing Instructor Nancy Wilson

A new addition to the Nursing department this term is Nursing Instructor Nancy Wilson.

"I've been teaching a long time, and I really enjoy watching people learn and grow," Wilson said. She feels that by teaching she is able to make more of a positive contribution to society and the gerontology field. Wilson is making her return to teaching at Clackamas after working as the director in nursing homes.

Some of Wilson's past 18 years of experience also consist of teaching at two other colleges, working as the director of nursing in acute-care settings and term-care facilities and working with the homeless.

"Nurses will be able to enact the nursing rule in a holistic manner, within a framework of respect, for the dignity and individuality of every person," Wilson stated on the competencies required of all CCC nurses.

Wilson was interested in working at Clackamas after hearing President Keyser's speech on honor for others. She feels that her values and CCC's values are complimentary to each other.

New Math Instructor James Dickinson was unavailable for comment.

Office Administration Instructor Tanya Patrick

Office Administration Instructor Tanya Patrick has become a new member of the Business department at Clackamas, teaching courses in keyboarding, Lotus, Business English and electronic calculators.

"I can bring in a little of my own experience to the classroom in not only skill-building, but human relations," Patrick said on how she will benefit

Clackamas students.

Patrick has more than 20 years of experience in her field. When not teaching, she works in the business world to help keep her and her classes up to date with all the latest business information and materials. Patrick guarantees students they will not graduate from her classroom with out-of-date information.

English Instructor Jeff Knorr

"Helping to facilitate language" is what Jeff Knorr, CCC's new English instructor, hopes to contribute to his literature and technical writing classes.

Knorr would like to present a solidly diverse learning experience to all students in writing and literature. Past teaching experiences, such as teaching sixth- and ninth-grade History and English in Barcelona, Spain, will help him to achieve this goal.

Knorr also has past teaching experience at Butte College and at four different colleges in San Francisco, where he taught part-time for two years.

Knorr is working on computer-aided instruction in writing programs, as well as adding more computer lab work time for writing classes, to help enhance the programs.
