Language clubs work for same cultural goals

by Brendon Neal
Staff Writer

The German and International Clubs work from different angles to bring about better cultural understanding.

Deutschen Veren, the German club, is made up of the students who are studying German. One of their main goals is to show students that learning a language can be interesting and enjoyable, despite being quite a bit of work.

The club currently meets on Mondays in the lounge area on the second floor of Barlow by the vending machines, and on Wednesdays in B237. Thomas Thackery, president of the club, explained that they hope to get more people involved by having two meetings a week, because students often have busy schedules and have trouble getting together at one time.

Thackery says language and culture are really intertwined concepts. In order to study a language, one should also study the culture. Both in the class and in the club, they focus on both in order to learn about Germany.

The advisor of the club is Dick Stone, who teaches German at Clackamas. Lisa Lyndquist is the secretary and Susan Belinski is vice-president.

In order to help fund the club, the students have put on a Gustav's Raffle. Cesar Use won the raffle was drawn on May 1. He received a gift certificate to Gustav's restaurant. On April 24, they had reached about the halfway mark of the amount of money they were hoping to get for the raffle. Their hope is to get about $500.

The International Club is mainly made up of students from other countries who are going to school at Clackamas. Some of these are students just studying in the United States. Others are from other nations but have moved to the U.S. permanently. However, other students who want to learn about other cultures or meet some of the foreign students going to Clackamas are invited to attend.

The club met during the fall term. However, because of lack of interest, they didn't meet during the winter term. They met for the first time this term last Friday at a party put on by David Campbell, the new advisor. Prior to this term, Ellen Wolfson was the advisor. However, she won't be here next year. About 20 members attended the party. The members came from places such as Switzerland, Japan, Indonesia and Mexico.

The club has been around for many years. However, Campbell said the club has varied in membership and how active they were from year to year, depending on what the members wanted and what their frame of mind was.

The purpose was to get the students to get to know each other. "Some of the foreign students do not know each other," Campbell said.

To break that feeling of isolated cut off, as students feel coming from another country or culture, the club has meetings over the course of the term to get to know each other.

The club has about $800 in their account that they earned selling T-shirts, food, etc. Along with the Foreign Language classes and clubs, they will be a part of the International Day on May 10.

There have been officers of the club previously. However, they haven't had any elections this term.

In preparation for next year, Campbell feels that, "It is probably important for students before they start here to get together, to get to know each other to break some of that discomfort they might have in a new situation." He hopes to make contact with the new students before registration and do something together.

New fee to be put into effect

✓ Earnings to provide structural change

by Brendon Neal
Staff Writer

Starting summer term, there will be a new student fee put into effect.

The fee is $2 per credit hour, but the charge will only go up to 14 credits. Any credits beyond 14 will not have a registration fee included. Tuition waivers will not cover these new fees.

The fee is in place of a $2 per credit increase originally planned. The major difference is that it only goes up to 14 credits, instead of including 18 and over like a normal tuition fee increase would include. In addition, the revenue is designated for specific uses.

The athletic fund will receive the majority of the funds at 53 percent. The technology fund is next on the list at 31.7 percent. Associated Student Government will receive 8.65 percent of the money. The co-curricular fund will receive the least amount at 6.628 percent.

“Beginning summer term, there will be a $2 per credit hour fee.”

The fee will not fund any new initiatives, but is instead a structural change. In order to keep the revenue from the fees separate from state and/or tax resources, the funds will be put into "special revenue" funds where it will then be split to the four areas.

The expected profit from the fee is $264,000. While the fee is going to be called a Student Registration Fee, Mary Dikes, director of admissions, says the fee will actually be a kind of participation fee. This is because the fee will not go into general funds, but instead go toward four areas.

At the end of the 95-96 school year, the administration and ASG will examine the result of the fee and determine whether to continue it and/or change it. Suggestions are welcome in either office in the Community Center or in the ASG suggestion boxes.
