

Students to perform Edward Albee plays

Karin Redston
Staff Writer

CCC's production of "The Lady From Dubuque," written by Edward Albee, will open on Feb. 29 in CCC's McLoughlin Theater.

The play is set in the 70s and centers on three couples who are out for dinner. One of the women is dying and has turned very bitter towards everyone and everything. Although the play has several light and humorous moments, the underlying theme of the play is painful and sad.

According to Instructor David Smith-English, who is directing the play, this play is Albee's favorite.

"I guess what Albee's really doing here is exploring the difference between reality and pretense," said Smith-English.

In addition to the "Lady From Dubuque," two other Albee one-act plays will be performed titled "Zoo Story" and "The Sandbox." "Zoo Story" stars student Daniel Cook who plays the part of Jerry, a non-stop talker, and Aaron Pfenning who plays the part of Peter, a patient English man who listens. "Zoo Story" is directed by student Mike Gerber.

"Jerry's like one of those people," said Cook said. "If you've ever ridden the bus before, like one of those people who come up and talk to you and just won't leave you alone."

"The Sandbox" will also star Cook in the part of the father. This play circles around the grandmother and the "Angel of Death." The grandmother, played by CCC student Karen Champ, has been brought to the beach to die and recounts her life. The mother is played by Rae Cooper and the boy is played by Ed Asquith. The play is directed by Jim Miller.

Edward Albee arrives on Feb. 9 and will be critiquing student written plays, scenes from "The Lady From Dubuque" and one act plays, "The Sandbox" and "Zoo Story."

"I find a little anxiety about the notion that we will be putting something up for him to take a look at and to critique," said Smith-English.

"You want to be perfect but no matter how hard you try it's not perfect enough, especially for this guy...a three-time Pulitzer Prize winner," said Gerber.

Although student talent ranges vary, commitment has been excellent, according to Smith-English.

"I feel really good about this cast because of this commitment to learning and to growth," said Smith-English.

You do not need to be present at the time of the drawing.

The purpose of "Moving On Week" is to help students with preparations for the next phase after Clackamas.

"We wanted to let students know that once you're done here at Clackamas it doesn't just stop here," said Drebin. "We want to provide assistance in choosing a school and knowing about application and admission deadlines. This week is to help students realize that there is a life after Clackamas."

"Moving On Week" is possible because of the Foundation Mini-Grant Award Program. Each year staff members are asked to submit a mini-grant of something innovative, creative or where there is a need on campus. This accepted proposal is how "Moving On Week" was created.

Despite bad weather, symposium a success

Andrew Beck
Staff Writer

The first Herbal Symposium held at Clackamas last Saturday was a huge success according to Elizabeth Howley, department chair of Ornamental Horticulture.

Over 200 gardeners, herb growers and other people braved bad weather and snow to attend the Herbal Symposium in Gregory Forum.

The event was one of the first of its kind held in Oregon and included six keynote speakers from across the nation. Subjects discussed ranged from using herbs as everlasting in floral designs to gardening with herbs.

Three CCC students, Raina Payne, Michelle Deford, and Judie Arden helped in planning the Herbal Symposium and overseeing its production.

Program offers free screening to diagnose eating disorders

Amy K. Hanson
Managing Editor

Along with the nation-wide collegiate National Eating Disorders Screening Program, Phi Theta Kappa and the counseling center are joining forces to heighten eating disorder awareness at a special program on Feb. 6.

The program will begin at 5:30 p.m. in CC127 and will provide free, anonymous screenings to the public in honor of Eating Disorder Awareness Week, Feb. 5 to 11.

Participants will listen to a presentation describing the different types of eating disorders, complete a screening questionnaire and meet one-on-one with a health care professional. Those showing eating disorder symptoms will be encouraged to set up an appointment with professional for a full evaluation.

"Each year we see students with advanced eating disorders brought into the health center only after they have passed out while trying to jog. Even then, lying in the hospital bed with a weak heartbeat and almost no blood pressure, it often takes days for the students to admit they have been eating practically nothing and exercising compulsively," said Kathy Hotelling, Ph.D., President of the Association of University and College Counseling Center Directors.

An eating disorder is an illness that results from severe body image distortion and an obsession with weight. Those with a disorder are terrified of gaining weight and consequently diet, binge and purge while their mental and physical health deteriorate. The effects can lead to depression, substance abuse, heart problems, osteoporosis and reproductive problems, as well as possible death.

Four to five percent of all female college students suffer from anorexia, bulimia or binge eating disorders, according to David ality, cannot be state funded. This would mean HIV information, sex ed books, even literature, that mentions gay or lesbian people, would also have to state a moral disapproval of homosexuality for it to use state funds. It could not be neutral, it must express a negative connotation."

When asked about what existing review procedures currently affect public library content, Mabon stated, "Each library has a review process in which books are challenged or complaints are taken in and reviewed... that policy exists right now; it is just simply reinforced by our initiative. For example, if somebody for some unknown reason wanted to put a book in whatever library, the Beavercreek public library, on The Ten Steps to Teenage Cannibalism, the parents and the community might say, 'No this is inappropriate' and file a complaint and then it would be reviewed by the librarian and determine weather or not this met proper standards."

Mabon also pointed out,

"There would be a provision that says, in essence, moral objection to certain sexual behavior, such as homosexuality, cannot be construed to be discrimination based on civil rights."

For the initiative to be placed on the 1996 general election, the OCA is required to gather 97,681 signatures by petition before July 8, 1996.

Mabon says that there are enough people on their mailing list to acquire the required signatures by mail, but they are mainly going to actively petition at various sites.

"Were going to be fully out there, because it cost quite a bit of money to mail to 200,000 households," Mabon said.
