

Inside

Clackamas takes on the Chemeketa Storm tonight in the biggest game of the year. Read more on page 7.

Along with Brad Stiles, 20 new faculty members join Clackamas Community College staff full-time. Read more on pages 4-5.

Sports Scores

Volleyball
Clackamas beats Mt. Hood	15-12, 15-3, 16-14
Quick Stats:
Amy Kraljev	9 kills, 22 digs
Judi Arbuckle	8 kills, 18 digs

Volleyball
Clackamas vs. Chemeketa	Tonight
Quick Stats:
Clackamas [5-0, 21-1]	- Ranked #22 in nation
Chemeketa [5-0, 23-0]	- Ranked #12 in nation

THE CLACKAMAS PRINT

Wednesday, October 7, 1998

Clackamas Community College

Oregon City, Oregon

Volume XXII, Issue 1

Shelbi Wescott studies in the re-opened library.

AMY PARRISH / Clackamas Print

The library is back in business for using computers or for studying. LRC Director Cyndi Andrews said of the move, "It was like gathering all your relatives together and moving all of their things five times, moving each item from wherever and returning them all to the same shelves in the same order. We are all very happy with the way it is now."

Library emerges after reconstruction

ROBERT SCHOENBERG
Editor-in-Chief

The library in the Dye Learning Center is open again after major reconstruction due to water intrusion problems that developed almost three years ago.

Because of limited space, only about a fourth of the library's books were used in the temporary location in a number of modular buildings brought to the campus while reconstruction was progressing.

Over the summer, library staff moved 14,000 books from these temporary modules and another 36,000 books and magazines in boxes back to the Dye Learning Center.

"It is wonderful to be back in this building, wonderful for the staff, faculty and the students. Books are meant to be on shelves. An inaccessible book is a waste of money," said Cyndi Andrews, Learning Resource Center Director, who is in charge of the library.

She said all the library's previous resources are now available as well as some new ones like EBSCO's Academic Search in Fulltext, a magazine and journal article database available not only at the library but also on the internet for students and faculty.

To learn how to access this resource, she said, there would be instructional classes offered throughout October.

The damage to the buildings was the result of water intrusion beneath the exterior walls, which rotted the wood framing of the buildings. While under construction the buildings were closed for use by the college and wrapped in protective covers.

According to Peter Angstadt, Dean of College Services, the building re-construction has "met all expectations."

The other buildings involved in the re-construction, Gregory Forum and Streeter Hall, have also opened up again, and one building at the Wilsonville campus opened up last spring.

Since the buildings have opened, most departments that were relocated throughout the campus during the reconstruction have relocated yet again as new space has opened up. For two years office space was tight around campus with many of the faculty doubling up in cramped quarters.

The larger building now allows comfortable space that was missing in the modules; there is now a lounge area and reading areas with couches to sit on.

Along with the library, the foreign language lab in Dye has also reopened with a full complement of services, classroom space and computers for students.

The library staff is pleased to be back in the building after working for two years under very limiting conditions. Leslie Mason, a part-time circulation staff member said that she was glad to finally be able to accommodate more students with more books.

"Students are more willing to come over here. I think they were scared away when we were in the modules," she said.

New ASG officer visits Washington, D.C. for first time

Christine Reed, a freshman at Clackamas, took a trip to Washington DC two weeks ago that uncovered many opportunities for her as Legislative Officer for Associated Student Government.

With David Ledoux, ASG President, and Mindy Brown, High School Relations Coordinator, Reed spent Sept. 16-20 at our nation's capital. Their trip was made in association with the Committee for Education Foundation. While she was in DC, Reed kept a journal of her activities and those who inspired her. Here are some highlights from the chronicles of her trip.

Sept. 17: "Today starts the beginning of my first day in Washington DC. First, we were on our way to the National Education Association Building for our morning conferences. At the NEA building we attended a seminar called, 'The Squeeze on Education.' The seminar was filled with many key speakers from the Congress. The most amazing part of the seminar was the fact that it was about education, and David and I were the only students present. I couldn't believe that more students weren't there for such an important meeting. There were about 200-300 people who attended and all of them seemed to be over the age of 30. On the other hand, though, it was really encouraging that adults from another generation were taking a stand in support of education.

"After the seminar, the three of us headed towards the Senate and House Buildings. We were delivering informational letters asking them to participate in the American Student Association of Community Colleges next March... We spoke to Congresswoman Darlene Hooley...she discussed with us her

See Visit, page 6

State candidates speak to students at Gregory Forum

State candidates from Oregon running for office this Fall have been brought to the CCC campus for three days this week to raise voter awareness.

Rock The Vote, a national organization, brings candidates to colleges and universities to speak to students and also encourages students to participate in the election process by registering them to vote.

"This has been our biggest year for number of candidates who have participated," said ASG vice-president, Bryan Fauntez.

The candidates are speaking at Gregory Forum and have about 30 minutes to address the audience and take questions.

ASG had two questions that they asked each candidate: 1. What is your vision for the future of American education? 2. What are your qualifications for the office that you are seeking this fall?

So far this week Rock the Vote has registered 300 new voters.

"We didn't get that many people to vote in last Springs ASG Elections," said Fauntez.

Today's speakers and events

- 10 a.m. ....Lynn Snodgrass, R-Boring, House District 10; Tom Civiletti, D-Milwaukie, House District 25
- 10:30 a.m. ...Roger Beyer, R-Molalla, House District 28
- 10:45 a.m. ...David Mayfield, R-Oregon City, House District 26
- 11a.m. ....Stu Rasmussen, D-Silverton, House District 28; Mike Smith, D-Clackamas, House District 10
- 11:30 a.m. ...Monroe Sweetland, D-Clackamas, House District 10
- Noon .....Verne Duncan, R-Milwaukie, Senate District 12
- ASG-sponsored BBQ, CCC courtyard
- 12:30 p.m. ...Here Comes Everybody: live band performance, benefits child care

