Sadly, the real world isn't nearly as forgiving as the college world.

The nice people at the IRS don't point out your mistakes and cheerfully refund your money. Challenges in the workplace don't come in a convenient multiple-choice format. And you can't just blow off Friday because the siren song of the Thursday night kegger beckoned.

The real world is different.

Fortunately, there's a university that recognizes this fact. And its entire approach to education has been designed to respond to it.

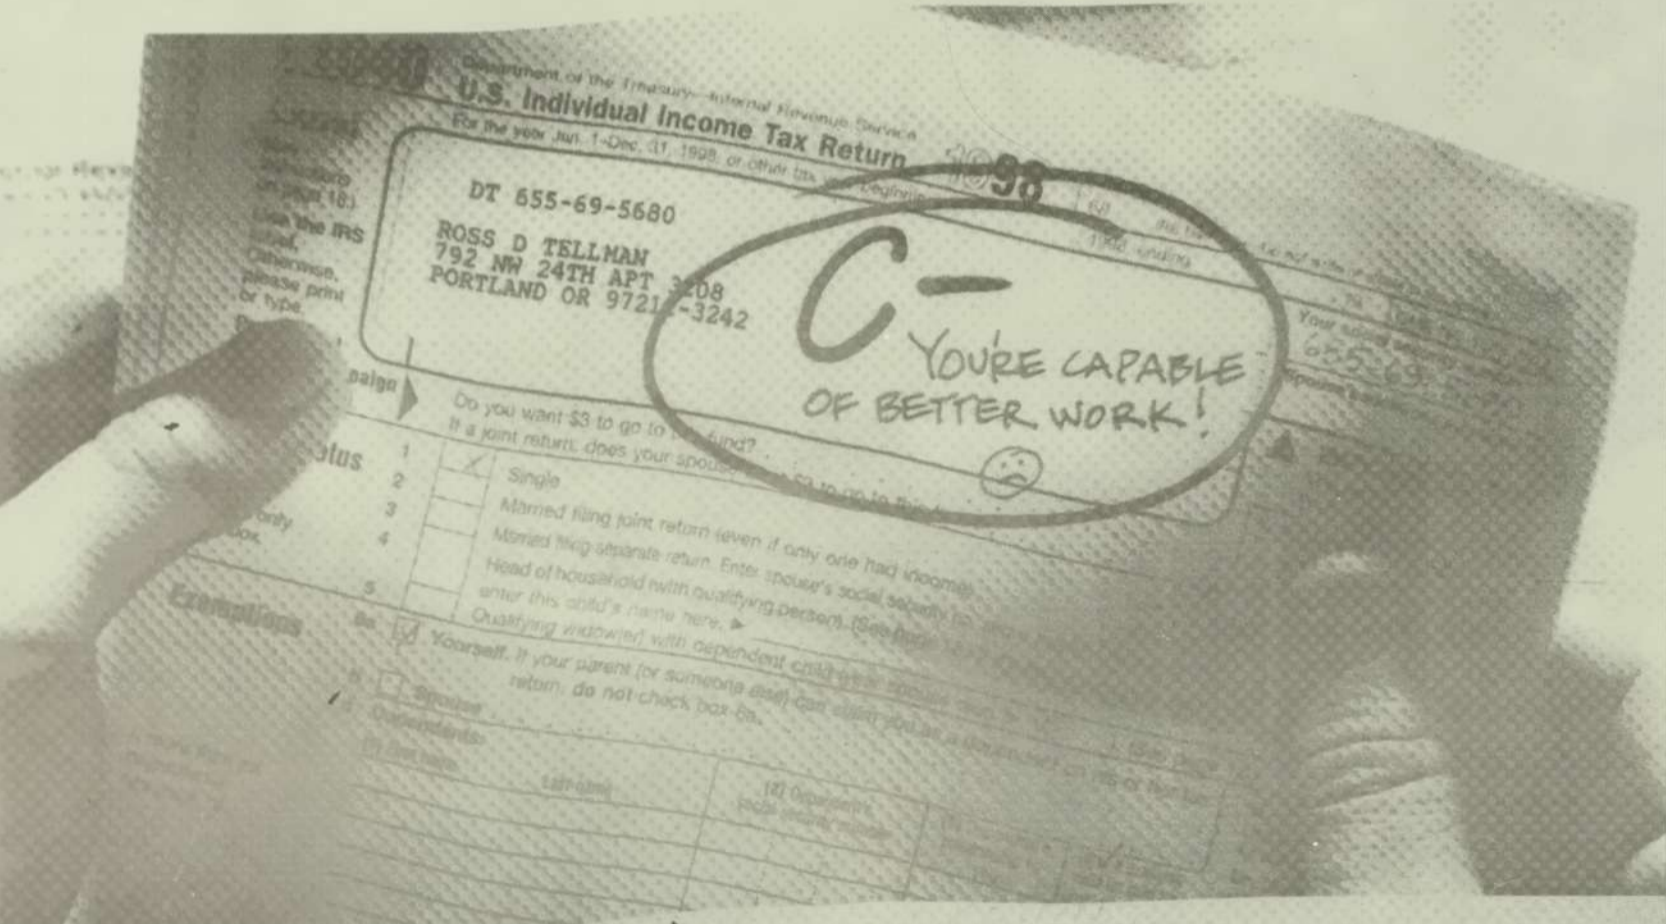

How? By inventing a curriculum that's grounded in the practical and pragmatic just as solidly as the theoretical and academic.

Where knowledge comes not only from textbooks and lectures, but from actual experiences working in your field.

A place that fully prepares you to exit the cozy environs of college by arming you with crucial skills in communication and teamwork and critical thinking that the not-so-cozy real world demands.

The university is Portland State. And if you'll visit www.pdx.edu or call (503) 725-9983 we'll be happy to tell you how you can, quite literally, learn more.

IF COLLEGE IS SUPPOSED TO PREPARE YOU FOR THE REAL WORLD, HOW COME THE REAL WORLD ISN'T MORE LIKE COLLEGE?
