Short plays bring long laughs at one acts

SHADRA BEESLEY

Staff Writer

"It's like a live-action cartoon,"- Joe Williams, actor.

The student one-acts are in full swing. Clackamas theater students have been hard at work casting, directing and producing one-act plays. Now the fruits of their labor are ripe for their fellow peers to enjoy.

Above, Williams colorfully describes "Stretch the Bench" by Carol Korty. Student director Wendy Reese has chosen to present this clever comedy in conjunction with "The Pumpkin," another play by Korty. These two plays have the same cast of characters: Tall, Small, Extremely Long, and Clown. Reese found the two plays in a book of children's plays in which these four characters are the stars of every show. Reese's adaptation stars Sara Gundell as Tall, Sarah Rose as Small, Verena Morrill as Extremely Long, and Jayne Stevens as Clown.

Kristi McKenzie and her assistant director Mackenzie Burnett have chosen to present "Impromptu" by Tad Mosel. It is a play about four actors who are asked to show up and put on a performance of their choice. In this play within a play the actors are searching for the answer to a profound question. After working through conflicting ideas and personalities "the characters discover the true meaning of theater," McKenzie explains. The cast consists of Dave Tahler as Ernest, Joe Williams as Tony, Annie Rimmer as Lora, and Dawnie Drebin as Winifred.

Sarah Rose will present "Medea" by Christopher

Durang. It is a spoof on Greek theater and also on musicals. "There are lots of big laughs," Rose promises. Jayne Stevens will play the main character, Medea. The chorus includes Dawnie Drebin, Wendy Reese, and Mat Lingmann. Also, Jason the Argonaut will be played by Joe Williams, the Messenger by Mindy Crouchley, and the Angel by Sara Gundell.

Finally, "Eye to Eye," by Christopher Graybill, will be presented as seen through the eyes of Kira Whiting. A man and a woman meet at a restaurant for a blind date. The evening develops into a male/female power struggle, as the couple argue over gender roles. "Eye to Eye" stars Sarah Rose as Woman, Joe Williams as Man, and David Tahler as the waiter.

The student one-acts will be shown June 4, 5 and 6 at noon, and June 6 at 8 p.m. in the McLoughlin Theater. All four plays will be presented in a one-hour production, and it's free!
