Live music, fundraisers at Clubs Fair

Annual event offers campus clubs chance to recruit members

Eight campus clubs congregated in the Community Center small area (formerly home to the registration desks) last Thursday in hopes of recruiting potential members.

The Clubs Fair, sponsored by ASG, did not draw an enormous crowd this year, but according to past participants, the atmosphere was a bit livelier than previous fairs.

"I thought it went great," said ASG Clubs Senator Dominique Rodriguez, who organized the event.

Zeke Goodrick, a local musician, provided live music. He described his music style as alternative rock. When not singing and playing his guitar, Goodrick works as a disc jockey.

Although he is not a student himself, Goodrick said that he was invited to play at the fair by some friends who attend

Clackamas.

The main goal of the Clubs Fair is to increase campus awareness about the clubs and recruit new members. Several clubs also took advantage of the opportunity to do some fundraising.

The French Club, for example, sold Valentine goodies during the fair to raise money for their scholarship program, which helps students afford French classes and even pays the way for a few lucky members to travel to France.

The German Club had a similar motive, selling pie and beverages to help defray the costs of a trip to Germany this summer for first and second-year German students at CCC.

Phi Theta Kappa, the college honors club for students who earn at least a 3.5 GPA, sold raffle tickets to benefit the American Cancer Society.

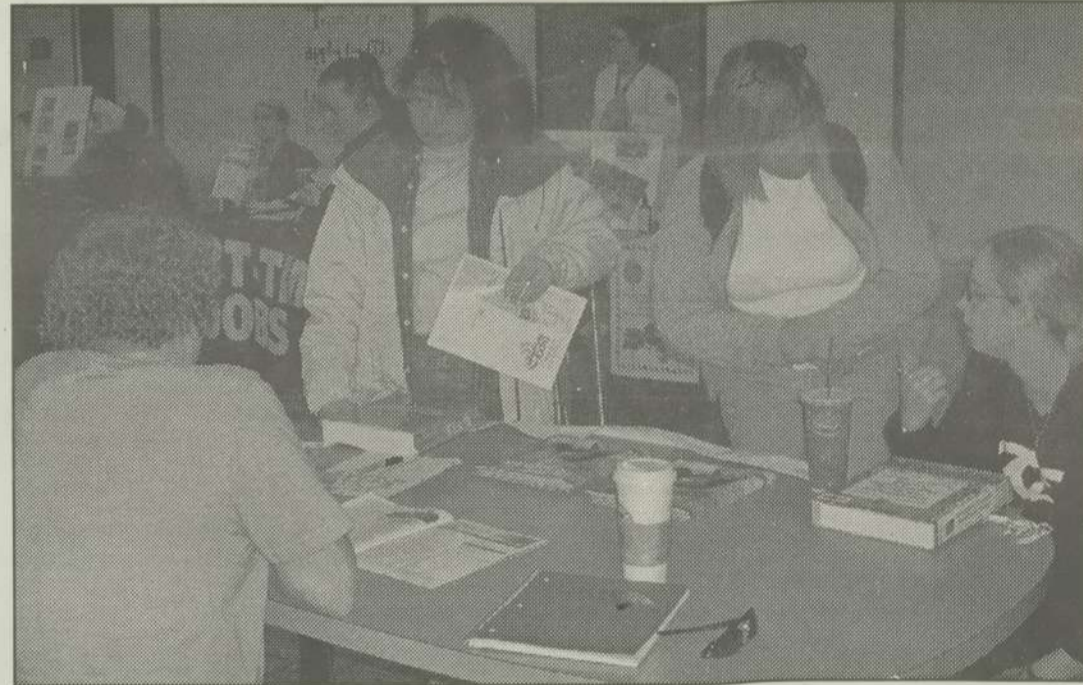

Other participants in this year's fair included Campus

Crusade for Christ, the Horticulture Club, the Rainbow Club, BCM Christian Fellowship and the Student Nurses Association. Each club hosted a table or two offering information about their groups and encouraging passersby to leave their names on sign-up sheets.

"We more than doubled [in club attendance] since last term," said a Campus Crusade for Christ representative, who was eager to see the club grow even more.

Besides the hope of growing in size, the participating clubs had an added incentive to gain new recruits. The ASG offered a $50 reward to the group who was able to sign the most potential new members at the Clubs Fair. The name of the winning club was not available at press time.

Students who would like a complete list of campus clubs at Clackamas can visit the ASG office in the Community Center.

Fundraising for existing members and attracting new ones was the purpose of the Clubs Fair last week. Over 25 campus clubs accommodate almost any interest

There are approximately 26 active clubs here at Clackamas. The aim of any campus club is to provide activities and interaction for students with similar interests.

The focus of each of CCC's clubs varies. Some have religious or spiritual ties, like Campus Crusade for Christ, Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the LDS Student Association.

Others concentrate on academic interests, such as Amateur Astronomers, the Horticulture and Speech Clubs and the Student Nursing Association. Of course, there are the ever-present language clubs: French, German and Spanish.

Several venues provide more information on the purposes, contacts and meeting times for each club. Stop by the ASG office in the Community Center for a complete list or visit the college's website www.clackamas.cc.or.us/clubs for names, phone numbers or email address. Information is also available in Club Corner, usually located on the back page of The Clackamas Print.
