The Clackamas Print took home three first-place awards, with a total of eight overall, including a second-place award for General Excellence, last Friday at the 2004 Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association's (ONPA) Collegiate Newspaper Contest at Western Oregon University in Monmouth.

"I thought it was awesome. In a time of change for our staff, with us having moved locations twice this year, we were still able to pull off the kind of paper that we do week after week," said Co Editor-in-Chief Cory Price. "I am very proud of our staff."

News Editor Karlin Johnson won first place for Best News Story for her March 10, 2004, story entitled "Hate crime on campus." Co Editor-in-Chief Cyndee Mady took first place for Headline Writing. Former staff writer Jadon Triplett picked up a first-place award for his Feb. 11, 2004, review "Mafia' revives old-style gangsters," to take Best Review honors.

Second-place honors went to production assistant Michael Cooper for Best House Ad and the aforementioned award for General Excellence of the overall paper.

Honorable mentions were given to Ben Maras and his opinion section for Best Section, Feature Editor Karen Hill for Best Writing and Ben Maras for his staff editorial published Feb. 11, 2004, for the "Gadget craze is here to stay" opinion on camera phones.

"I am extremely impressed but not surprised. The caliber of The Print staff is extraordinary," said English Department Chair Emily Orlando. "Their dedication and hard work representing the college community is very admirable. I am really proud of the whole staff and these great accomplishments."

The Print's eight awards more than doubled last year's total and marked the second consecutive year that the paper finished second in General Excellence.

Lane Community College's The Torch, out of Eugene, won this year's first-place award for General Excellence. A total of seventeen community colleges competed for ONPA awards this year.

Congressman and presidential candidate Dennis Kucinich will be on campus Sunday, May 16!

Congressman Kucinich will be speaking and answering questions of students and community members in the Community Center from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

VOTE: ASG candidate express focuses, good

Along with involvement between students and staff, Stokes express a strong desire to get students more involved with each other as well.

"I know it's a community college and people just come here to get their school done and go home, but that's the one thing I don't like," said Stokes. "With universities there is more activity going on and I love that, and I want more of that at a community college."

Murphy reiterates the importance of student to student connection.

"With any community college, its sad that it's disconnected between students ... to see people not caring about
