The Clackamas volleyballers picked up two important wins last week, capturing the NWAACC Southern Region title last Friday against Southwestern Oregon CC (SWOCC).

The Cougars jumped into last Friday's game with an 8-1 league record good for first in the South. They came away with a victory in four games by scores of 30-26, 30-16, 22-30, and 30-28.

"[SWOCC] played the best game they ever had against us," Head Coach Kathie Woods said. "They took it to us, but we beat them. This just shows how strong the South is."

The Cougars were able to put together a total team effort giving them their ninth league win this year and their 26th win overall. Statistical leaders for the Cougars were: Brianna McLeod with 13 kills and 13 digs, Jessica Heidenreich with 13 kills, Lindsey Girod-Burgess busted out with 24 digs; she was also Cougar Player of the Week. Crystal Jeffries added nine kills.

Woods is very happy with her team's success so far this season.

"We captured the Southern Region championship and that's huge," Woods said. "Because of our success early, no one in the South can catch us. This is great because our region can be so competitive, I'm really proud of them."

Last Wednesday, Oct. 20, the Linn-Benton Roadrunners traveled to CCC and got served

McLeod had 22 kills in the win and is one of five sophomores that will be honored at tonight's home game in the Randall gym at 7 p.m.

Real local haunts

Ghost sightings in Oregon City and beyond

Portland has always been a strange and unique place. And this city is certainly no stranger to an occasional ghost. The following are just a few of the more infamous hauntings in the area.

The closest haunting is the McLoughlin house in Oregon City. Dr. John McLoughlin, like many spirits, began his haunting only after his grave was disturbed. He and his wife were both seen (and heard) haunting their home at its new location.

Dr. John McLoughlin was most likely in search of revenge. In life, he had loaned some money to a certain Mrs. Wells, who failed to cover her last payment of $43. 143 years later, a descendant of Mrs. Wells became curator of McLoughlin's relocated home. The McLoughlins' bodies were moved along with the house, and their spirits stirred in search of revenge.

Money began disappearing, and was later found in a locked drawer. The piteous, faint cries of his wife were frequently heard, and John's tall-figured ghost was seen on several occasions. 15 years ago, the debt was repaid, and there have been no reports since.

Adjacent to the McLoughlin house is the house of Dr. Forbes Barclay. This establishment is haunted by numerous spirits. The

In order to better inform the student body here at Clackamas, the following brief explanations are provided on all eight measures on the Oregon ballot. Each explanation is in layman's terms and is very general in nature. For more information on these Ballot Measures, read a copy of the "Voter's Pamphlet-State of Oregon General Election 2004," which is available at most municipal and county libraries, or by going to www.oregon.gov and going to "General Election 2004." Remember that all ballots are due by 8 p.m. on Nov. 2.

Measure 31:
Amends the Oregon Constitution. Will allow the postponement of an election if one of the candidates dies before the election.

Measure 32:
Amends the Oregon Constitution. Will change what monies from motor home fees are spent on (from highways and parks to building-code related services).

Measure 33:
Amends the Oregon Medical

Marijuana Act. Creates non-profit dispensaries to produce, possess and sell marijuana to registered patients and/or caregivers. Requires dispensaries to pay license fees, keep records, submit monthly reports, be subject to inspection and pay 10-20 percent of gross revenue to the Oregon Medical Marijuana Program to fund the program. Requires a program for indigent patients to receive medical marijuana at no cost from licensed dispensaries. Increases the amount of marijuana that may be possessed by a registered patient or designated caregiver to 10 marijuana plants and one pound of usable marijuana at any one time.

Measure 34:
Requires the State Board of Forestry to manage the Tillamook and Clatsop State Forests, restoring old growth in half while the other half would be managed for sustainable timber and revenue production in a way that is at least as protective as what is currently required by the State Forest Management Plan.

Measure 35:
Amends the Oregon Constitution. Imposes a $500,000 limit on non-economic damages (i.e., pain and suffering)
