or the applicant was charged before the age 18, then there should be eligibility problems. Other than that, good luck.

So why does the Department put so much emphasis on drug charges over any others? The only possible reason I can see for this is that the government doesn't want to pay for someone's ongoing drug addiction, which makes sense to a certain extent. I mean, convicted felons don't even need consistent funding to do something stupid and illegal. But it costs more every time a user decides to get more drugs, and the government doesn't want to fund that.

Although the Department of Education may be skewed priorities for the general public, at least they are cutting down on paying for people's addictions.
