

Mini tour: community gardens

PHOTO: Kathy Vonstriver, the main organizer of the community gardens, tends to her garden that was unfortunately over-run by weeds due to poor weather on Oct. 9.

PHOTO: Joan Chelson is in her tomato garden at CCC on Oct. 9, preening her plants while picking the ripe ones. Her vegetable garden is very established, and she has been growing at the community gardens for years.

Information

Clackamas Community College's community gardens are located next to the Lewelling Building, near the Environmental Learning Center. Community members are welcome to grow their own flowers and vegetables.

In fact, in the summer, students may rent their own 700-square-foot garden plot for $20. CCC waters the plants twice a week.

Approximately 100 garden plots are available, some of which are year-round.

Source:

<http://www.clackamas.cc.or.us/inside.asp?content=1041>