

Four-year college calls you to enroll

1. More classes: most universities offer a greater number and variety of classes than community colleges, and that's a good thing if you like to take unique classes or extra classes not related to your major. Where else can you take a course named "Underwater Crime Scene Investigation"?

2. Better resources: there is so much more access to study groups, tutors, fitness clubs, intramural sports, you name it. There's always something new and fun to do at a four-year, even if you start it yourself.

3. More people: more people means ... more diversity! Clackamas isn't that small of a college but ever notice how you start to see the same people all the time? And they become the only people you talk to? At a university you're meeting new people every day and making friends you have a lot in common with, without even trying.

4. More opportunities: sororities, frats, clubs, internships, jobs ... the opportunities are, for a lack of a better word, endless at a secondary school, and there's just some opportunities at a 4-year that aren't available at a community college.

5. Bigger campus: imagine a sprawling campus so big you're forced to ride a bicycle from class to class. While a bigger campus has its pros and cons, one cool thing is that you're likely to discover something new often, so you'll never get bored.

6. More clubs: if you're interested in joining a club, while there are many here at CCC, there are usually so many more at a university. Just think of all the weird groups you can join for fun.

7. College athletics: while we're proud of our Cougar basketball team, we just don't get the college experience of packing into a stadium and cheering on the football or baseball team. If you're into them, athletics are a great reason to attend a university.

8. Change of scenery: there's so much more to see and experience and sometimes a change of surroundings is just what a college student needs to really thrive. So pick the college with the best weather and scenery and go for it (Miami anyone?).

9. Classes specific to your major: a four year university, when you're a transfer, is the place where you really get to sink your teeth into your major. Most of us can hardly wait to be done with our general education classes. This is where we really get to get into our future careers (and change our majors five or six times).

10. School spirit: the number of kids wearing "Clackamas" gear compared to another school, like say Oregon State, is not even comparable. Kids at universities have a lot more school spirit, and it's exciting to be proud of your school.

Mitzil Loncheria is deliciosa

Mitzil Loncheria in Oregon City pleases the palate with its authentic and local foods; the hours, however, aren't so accommodating

After finding out that the Spanish club was going to be taking a lunchtime field trip on April 28, I decided it was time to try out the café in Oregon City called Mitzil Loncheria.

When I arrived the first thing I noticed was the exterior which made me feel like I was walking through somebody's back door. Once inside however I was met with a rush of festive colors that would make anyone with a palette for visually pleasing aesthetics go into a celebratory rush of enthusiasm. The walls and ceiling were all painted in various colors spanning the rainbow and beyond.

The room was packed with 10 tables meant to seat 30 people. Nearly all of the tables were occupied by men and women from all walks of life, carrying on conversations and chattering about this and that between bites of food.

While perusing the menu, the only woman working the dining room brought out a tray with warmed tortilla chips and a mildly spiced bean dip with a dusting of cotija cheese.

The service was a bit slow;

but seeing as how busy they were the server was as prompt as possible. According to Blake Wyland, a customer who has been going to Mitzil since they opened, they generally are not that busy so each customer gets more personal attention. "Business comes in spurts," he said about the service time.

"I enjoy [coming in] once a month," said Wyland, because he likes things with meat and cheese.

The thing that struck me most was that most of the items were things that I was unfamiliar with such as mixteado, a grilled corn meal pouch filled with meat and cheese. Mine was stuffed with barba-coa which is a well seasoned shredded beef, and topped with lettuce, tomato, sliced avocado and sour cream. The flavor can only be described as divine and unique. My was washed down with of limonada or limeade. Overall the prices are very reasonable for a local café ranging from $5.75 for appetizers to $10 for entrees.

The only thing that I like is the hours of operation. They are closed Sunday and Monday, but are open Tuesday through Friday from 11 a.m. till 2 p.m., closing midweek to restock the kitchen and prepare for the dinner rush from 4:30 until 8 p.m. Saturday they are open all day from 9 a.m. till 8 p.m. Because of their irregular hours, classes are over you may have to wait until dinner time to enjoy the fabulous food they have to offer.

Mitzil Loncheria is located at 212 Molalla Avenue in Oregon City.
