Six of Clackamas' most influential athletes and coaches will be inducted into the college's Hall of Fame at the inaugural "Alumni Reunion and Hall of Fame" banquet Saturday, June 5.

Clackamas' most valuable include: 1988 Olympic team member Brian Abshire, Olympic medalist Matt Lindland, Olympic medalist and former world record holder in marathon Lisa (O'Dea) Martin, the 1971 wrestling team led by Coach Larry Wright and Assistant Coach

Don Conway, men's basketball coach from 1979 through 1998 Royce Kiser, and the founder of Clackamas' athletics department, Chuck Hudson.

The brainchild behind the creation of the college's long awaited Hall of Fame is former athletics director of 18 years, Jim Jackson, who made a parting promise upon retiring more than a year ago to fulfill his longtime dream and create the program. With the help of current athletic director Jim Martineau, the college's Foundation Office and dean of student services Bill Zuelke, the HOF is finally tangible.

To Martineau, the experience of hall-marking the school's past has been meaningful.

"I feel honored to be a small part of helping the college honor the great people who have paved the way for our current athletes and coaches. We have a great tradition of success over the years, and it is important to celebrate that success."

Tickets to the banquet are $35 for individuals. Tables of eight can be reserved for $500. All money made during the event will be donated to the athletics department.

To get more information or for tickets contact the athletic office.

Spring term flag football flops due to lack of interest

Traditionally played in the fall, ASG experiments with flag football in the spring

Flag football is played like the original game, but instead of taking a player to the ground by tackling them, you pull a colored flag off of that player. The play ends at the time the flag is pulled.

There is the occasional play that ends with a player on the ground but not as physical as the usual version of American football. Flag football has been set up to be played every Friday during spring term and fall term.

The game has almost come to an end for the term as summer nears. The weather hasn't been cooperating this term as much as some players would like. Since weather hasn't been good, it has caused keeping the game in question. This last week, its future was brought in question at an Associated Student Government meeting.

Bailee Sanders, Associated Student Government Vice President at Clackamas, said, "In the ASG meeting, it was discussed to potentially cancel flag football for the remainder of the term because there hasn't been anyone showing up to play. It was then decided to still provide the opportunity seeing as the term is almost over and in hopes that more students will come out."

There are many people at the school that are happy that ASG decided to let flag football stay. It gives them the chance to go out and see what it is about and if they like it. Weather permitting, of course. One of these people is Ashley Spring, a student at Clackamas.

Spring said, "I'm glad they didn't cancel it because I wanted to go play. I wanted to try it out."

Weather isn't the only reason people haven't been showing up to play. In these times students have jobs, classes and outside obligations. To add flag football in there is just another thing students would have to juggle, so instead of showing up, students are deciding against it.

Jen Borowczak, Grants Officer of ASG, said, "We expect it to be back in fall but it depends on what events we decide. Flag football was really popular in the fall so I think we will bring it back."

The sport is trying to stay alive through bad weather and is in need of people showing up. Flag football looks to make a return next spring and fall as long as athletes and non-athletes show up to play some football. The more people show up to play the longer it will stay at CCC. Look for it to make a return fall term 2010.
