Sugary treats motivate students

On any given day, by appointment or not, you can expect to find enticing treats like this one on the desk of counselor Stephanie Schaefer in McLoughlin Hall.

Everyone loves candy. Who doesn't? Students at Clackamas Community College especially have a particular taste for the sugary treats. Staff here at CCC know and even support this. Counselor Stephanie Schaefer in McLoughlin keeps stashes of candy to give to anyone with an appointment or even the occasional passerby. "You don't even have to be coming in to talk to me," said Schaefer. "Students are welcome to stop by, grab some candy, and be on their way." And Schaefer isn't the only one with such a generous outlook. The Clackamas Print is putting together a list of staff members and faculty who keep candy jars on their desk. Are you a sugar pusher? Do you know someone else who is? Please send us your tips and we'll publish a list of CCC's best free places to score Snickers, Skittles and M&M's.

Know any places to score free candy around campus? Stop by The Clackamas Print in Roger Rook 135 and tell us about it. Or email us at chiefed.clackamas.edu
