Professor CLACKAMAS

Dear Professor Clackamas, why are there so many squirrels on campus?

-Sincerely, Stumped on Squirrels

W

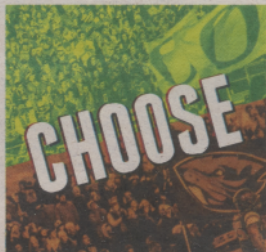

hat a nutty question, Stumped. (See what I did there?) Our campus is notorious for its very 'in your face' squirrel population. I myself have personally experienced the squirrels here on campus, the little beady eyed devils with their angry little claws full of disease.

There has been a lot of research involving the high population density, say, a college campus with a lot of squirrel-accessible trees and many students who will throw away trash that squirrels might find appetizing, which is why you'll often see them digging through trash.

They've gotten increasingly bold on the CCC campus, and some will even let you pet them, which is not advised. Like, at all.

Sincerely and irritated,
Professor Clackamas
