

Students elect new ASG president

Clackamas Community College students elected Brent Finkbeiner as Associated Student Government President over runner-up Hayley Campa. Finkbeiner made promises throughout his campaign, and with his election, says it's time to start addressing them.

"Now that it's been decided, it's time to move forward with our goals," Finkbeiner said. "I made students some promises and I'm going to make due on those promises."

To move forward on these goals, Finkbeiner stressed the need to get feedback and support from CCC students. "What I'd really like to do is get an idea of what are most important issues to students and address those issues," he said.

Along with addressing students' issues, Finkbeiner wants to spread awareness for different resources available on campus.

Brent Finkbeiner speaks during the campaign.

"I think the most important thing is getting students connected to their college, making sure that they know what is available to them right now, today," Finkbeiner said. "We have a lot of resources on campus whether you're dealing with addiction, depression, disability, there's a resource on campus that can help you with that."

Finkbeiner is excited to get started connecting to students across campus and in return help the students become more involved with what is happening at CCC.

"It's absolutely a pleasure and an honor to receive this position," Finkbeiner said. "To know that ... we had over 400 students vote, that the students are caring about who's representing them, that's really important to me. It speaks volumes; it tells me that my job is going to be that much more important because I made promises to students and I plan on making due to those promises."

Student journalists win big

The Clackamas Print collected 15 awards at the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association's Collegiate Day on May 8. The staff competed for awards against other two-year schools in Oregon. These schools include Lane Community College, Linn-Benton Community College, Mt. Hood Community College, Central Oregon Community College and others. There was a 10-award improvement from last year's five awards.

Co-chief editors, Zak Laster and Erin Carey, were both excited about the awards.

"I'm incredibly proud of the work that we've done and how far we've gotten as a class. It makes me feel good to see how much everyone has improved and I'm really happy," Carey said.

The awards include two best section awards: first place for news sections and second place for sports sections. The staff also won second place for the special section category for the back to school issue, first and second place for headlines, first place for the series of bond coverage articles and third place for best website.

Individual awards were also given at the event including a third place award for former TCP member Auriana Cook's sports story. Amber Fairbanks, staff writer, got second place for her review of The Boy Next Door. Photo editor Becca Moreno, received two awards for her photography including
