

COIN TOSS, $5 PINTS

Half Penny Lager

- Corny, late in taste; a light bodied beer. A drink for someone who doesn't like beer.

Black Hohl, 6.1 ABV

- More balanced than the Black Hohl Son, it's medium bodied with equal parts hoppiness and malty sweetness.

- "The Black Hohl was sort of my tried and true home recipe for years. I like dark beers and I like hoppy beers, and it was my attempt to marry the two flavors together."

— Tim Hohl

Black Hohl Son, 4.8 ABV

- Chocolatey, full bodied, hoppy. Very rich.

Nine Eyes IPA, 6.6

- Light bodied, hoppy, sweetness at the end.

A classic IPA.

Heads Red, 4.8 ABV

- Full bodied; a typical red ale. It has a pungent aroma that is complemented by sweetness.

Pie Hohl, 6.0 ABV

- A black currant beer. Full Bodied. My least favorite from Coin Toss, and of the night.

Honest Ale, 6.1

- A light bodied, honey tasting ale. Not as sweet as the average blonde, which may be an upside for many drinkers.

- "The Honest Ale was one of the first beers we made as a commercial brewery. That is based on a beer brewed by George Washington. All the founding fathers were brewers." — Hohl

MCMENAMINS, $5 PINTS

Ruby, 4.0 ABV

- Possibly too sweet for some, the raspberry is strong with this one. I enjoyed it as I found it to be unique among all the beers I drank.

Purple Haze, 4.0 ABV

- A beer for Jimi Hendrix himself. Same as the ruby it's fruit flavored, but with boysenberries. It's more tart, but in a pleasant way.

Terminator Stout, 4.0 ABV

- This stout is a rich malt. If you enjoy Guinness, look to this beer to satisfy your darker, smokier dreams. You can almost chew this thing.

Cider, 6.5 ABV

- This is my favorite cider. It's not too sweet and goes down like a soda. Three of these and you shouldn't be driving anywhere.

Opposite, Matt Rowning drinks his first beer of many to come. Top right, Tim Hohl pours the flight of eight beers for the sample tray.

OC BREWING CO, $5 PINTS

8-Bit Blonde, 4.8 ABV

- My favorite of the evening. Light bodied, it goes down easy, and it tastes so much like honey you'd want to put it on your cereal.

Brigid's Irish Red, 5.0 ABV

- Travels to the nose. Had the typical potpourri-like flavors of a red, but was more tame and drinkable than the Heads Red at Coin Toss.

Pioneer Pale Ale, 4.8 ABV

- Sweet and well rounded. "When I think of a good beer, I think of this," was the photographer's input.

Cherry Wheat, 5.0 ABV

- Not as sweet as you'd think. The cherry was very muted. It was like the brewer was scared of the sweet he was adding, and made a muted, lackluster brew.

Dissin' Terry Porter 4.8 %

- Pretty good, a medium bodied porter.

CONEY ISLAND, $2.25 PBR

Pabst Blue Ribbon, 5.0 ABV

- My beer of choice when I was "ahem" younger. Cold, it can be refreshing and light. Warm, it tastes like a hangover.
