Light snowfall blanketed the Portland Metro area Tuesday night, the city's first snowfall of the season. Forecasts predict further snowfall will occur later this week.

LATE FEES NO MORE

As college students, everyone has too much on their plate. With a math test on Tuesday, an English one on Thursday and online homework due by midnight, it's easy to forget that the book you checked out was due four days ago. Well, now you don't have to worry about late returns:

the Clackamas Community College library is eliminating fees. As long as the item isn't lost, you will not be fined for returning the book late. To celebrate the freedom from fees, the CCC library will be celebrating Valentine's Day with romance novels, treats and more lovely surprises!

RESUME WORKSHOP

Is your resume looking a little outdated? Or maybe you haven't even made one yet. It's no doubt that a resume can make or break you when it comes to getting hired and CCC wants to help. On Feb. 7, a class on resume building will be held from noon to 1 p.m. in the Community Center room 126 on the Oregon City campus. On Feb. 20, another class will be held at the same time and in the same place that is designed to help people improve and add to their outdated resumes. The third and final class is on March 5, taking place in the same location and time as the aforementioned classes. This last class is intended to help people that have had time gaps in their employment. To get involved with these classes, RSVP on the Career Center section of CCC's website.

BEEKEEPING FOR DUMMIES

Ever use the hashtag #SaveTheBees? Well, a select group of students at CCC are participating in a two-day class that is teaching them the rules and intricacies of beekeeping.

The first class was held on Feb. 2 and the second will be held on the following Saturday, Feb. 9. The $50 class is being held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

YOGA CLASSES

Grab your water bottle and your favorite mat because more yoga is coming to Clackamas Community College. The classes will be held in Lakeside Hall every Tuesday from 5:15-6:15 p.m. Experience isn't needed and everyone is welcome. Visit CCC's online event calendar to learn more.
