ASG election: Associated Student Government elections will be taking place this week. Every student is encouraged to vote to decide the president and vice president for the 2019-2020 academic year as well as any potential amendments to the ASG constitution. Information on the candidates can be found online at www.clackamas.edu/asg-elections. A link to vote will be sent out to student emails this week and will be available through May 3.

Reno Jazz Festival: CCC's jazz band placed second in the two-year college division at the Reno Jazz Festival last weekend. The band — as well as more than 350 other middle schools, high schools and colleges — made the trip to the University of Nevada, Reno to compete.

APAHM month: The Multicultural Center will be celebrating Asian Pacific American Heritage Month by screening documentaries and films about Asian Americans in the film industry and films with Asian American as leading roles. The screenings are free and vary in location. For more information, contact hannah.hit@clackamas.edu or look for the flyers around campus.

Winter honor roll: The honor roll and president's list for winter term has been announced, with a total of 1,394 students between the two. A 3.5 GPA is required to be named to the honor roll, whereas a 3.75 GPA is required to achieve president's list status. The full list can be found here: <https://tinyurl.com/y2plrs37>.

Ramadan: The Multicultural Center has arranged a prayer and relaxation space for anyone who is observing Ramadan. The space will be available from May 5 to June 4 each day from noon to 3 p.m. in Streeter 133. The Multicultural Center has also prepared a short informational and 'ways to be supportive' letter for students, staff and faculty.

Students travel for Shakespeare: If you enjoy Shakespeare in the park then you'll love the Oregon Shakespeare Festival. Clackamas Community College teachers Sue Mach, James Bryant-Trerise, Jeff McAlpine and Jim Eikrem recently took students to the festival for the third year in a row for an overnight theater experience.

The group went to Ashland and saw three shows: "As You Like It" written by the bard himself, the more modern "Hairspray" and "Cambodian Rock Band," a play about a woman trying to find her family's roots 30 years after they were forced to flee Cambodia. The student price for tickets is about $30 and rooms for an overnight stay usual cost $93. But that price can be split up between people willing to share a room, making it a fairly affordable trip that gives you time to get to know your fellow students. It's also open for anyone at CCC to join, not just the theater or English majors, so if this sounds like it's up your alley you can start looking forward to the next festival in March of next year.

You can get the info on that and many other upcoming events in the English department by contacting Sue Mach and signing up for the English department cohort list, which will help keep you up to date on any future outings, Shakespearean or otherwise. —Lilly Farris

Book prices update

The Print received a few responses about last week's article on textbook prices and rather than publish another article or issue any clarifications, we've decided to run the responses as they are. We believe in informing students of all their options and in responding promptly to our readers' concerns. Thank you to all of our readers and good luck on your search for more affordable textbooks.

I was reading the latest edition of the Print and saw the article about the prices of books at the bookstore compared to Amazon. I feel there was an important detail left out that could actually help a lot of students — our bookstore will price match.

Here is a link with more information: <https://bnc.pgtb.me/MMT77F>

I'm hoping there can be a correction. Please let me know if you have any questions or would like more information.

Thanks!

Wanted to say thank you for highlighting textbook affordability in your most recent issue. In the spirit of empowering students to make the right textbook choices for their circumstances, I want to remind everyone that the following textbook affordability options also exist at CCC:

CCC Library Course Reserves (free, short-term loans of textbooks and course materials)
ASG Lending Library and Book Exchange (buy/sell books at the Book Exchange; rent a book for $20)

DRC textbooks (limited number of free textbooks for students working with the DRC)

VET Center textbooks (limited number of free textbooks for students working with Veterans' Services)

Thanks! -Jane
