

Student media returns to campus

I want to welcome students back to our publication, The Clackamas Print, and say hello to the brave students who've returned to campus and the screen-weary who continue to attend classes online.

Through a lot of hard work, dedicated staff and writers, your student media is proud to share our first printed issue since March 2020.

On March 11, 2020, The World Health Organization declared COVID-19 a pandemic.

Since then, we have experienced amazing things that your fellow student journalists have covered: a worldwide pandemic, protests, a very eventful Presidential election, storms and wildfires.

For more than 20 months, my fellow writers and photographers have posted our work online while attending class using Zoom, and posting our stories online at TheClackamasPrint.com.

Like a lot of you, I adjusted to working from home, spent too much time on Zoom and missed visiting family and friends. I especially missed being on campus at Clackamas Community College and seeing friends in person.

Finally, for fall term 2021, we are back in person, even if it is with social distancing and masks.

I am so happy to be back on campus for my second year as the editor-in-chief for The Clackamas Print. When I first came to CCC in spring 2019, I planned on only taking a few classes to learn a few skills with social media.

That all changed the moment I was introduced to The Clackamas Print. I decided to get my journalism certificate, which turned into getting my DMC degree, which morphed into me getting my transfer degree.

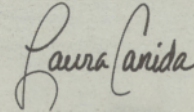

If you love writing, taking photographs, or want to learn all there is to know about putting together a newspaper, in print and online, The Clackamas Print is the best place to be.

The Print is always looking for writers, artists, and photographers. If you're interested in becoming a part of our award winning, student-run Clackamas Print, contact me at chiefed@clackamas.edu, stop by our lab in Pauling 151 or enroll in J215.

Until then, welcome back to the print edition of The Clackamas Print.

Your editor-in-chief,

Laura Canida

The Clackamas Print staff goals of fall 2021 were to learn something and not spread covid. Mission Accomplished!
