

Winter term brings challenges

The Clackamas Print staff made it through winter term. Ayla Fashana, in grey cap, was Photoshopped in.

Hello! We made it through winter term 2022. It wasn't easy.

Through a lot of hard work, dedicated staff, and writers, your student media is proud to share our second printed issue since March 2020.

Since fall term 2021, we have been back on campus, all while social distancing and wearing masks. Well, unless you count the two weeks we were on a pause and had to revert back to online and the joy of zoom. Besides our in-person journalism classes, the college also "paused" many other courses on campus during the Omnicron surge in January.

The college decided no vaccines, and no masks will be required spring term.

The theater was allowed to unmask for its March show, and Wacheno Welcome Center has finally opened.

Maybe in spring, we will see the return of the library, the weight room, and more students on campus?

If you love writing, podcasting, taking photographs, or want to learn all there is to know about putting together a newspaper, in print and online, The Clackamas Print is the best place to be. We will continue to report the news in spring term, and if you want to help, come join us.

The Print is always looking for writers, artists, and photographers. If you're interested in becoming a part of our award-winning, student-run Clackamas Print, contact me at chiefed@clackamas.edu or stop by our lab in Pauling 151.

We're back and looking forward to spring.

Your editor-in-chief,

Laura Canida

We stand with the people of Ukraine

The world has been shocked by the events that have been unfolding in Ukraine, The Clackamas Print offers our most sincere condolences to all affected people in our community as well as communities abroad. We condemn all acts of violence, anywhere they transpire, regardless of the situation. We should not forget to recognize similar atrocities that are often forgotten when they occur in non-white countries.

It is important to recognize the seriousness of this situation and the repercussions that will come from it. In this troubling time we should all offer grace and kindness where it is needed most. In the face of violence across the world, the best we can do at home is to maintain peace by any means necessary.

To help support people in our community who have been affected by these tragic events, the college has been contacting students and offering additional assistance wherever they may need.

In addition, CCC is offering resources including:

- Counseling services through the college.
- Assistance for employees through the Employee Assistance Program (Call 866-750-1327 or visit their website) Translation services in Russian and Ukrainian are available.
- Resources at the Multicultural Center, email mcambassadors@clackamas.edu.

The Clackamas Print Reporting the news of Clackamas Community College	Editor-in-Chief Laura Canida chiefed@clackamas.edu	Web Editor Hailey Reeves webeditor@clackamas.edu	Arts & Culture Editor Jake Kaiser aced@clackamas.edu	Associate General Assignment Editor Quinton Paul	The Clackamas Print aims to report news in an honest, unbiased and professional manner. Content published by The Print is not screened or subject to censorship. The Clackamas Print is free, but please take only one copy. Any person removing The Clackamas Print in bulk will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.
	Managing Editor Joseph Lohmolder maned@clackamas.edu	Photo Editor Dalton Elliott photoed@clackamas.edu	Associate Arts & Culture Editor Bella Vaughn	Staff Writers and Designers Alexis Lugo Connor McCoy Ayla Fashana Samantha Matson Ethan Rogers
	Design Editor Reilly Smith webeditor@clackamas.edu	News Editor Madalena Larkins newsed@clackamas.edu	General Assignment Editor Katie Skibba		