Sidney Rilatos (l) and Patrick "Patman" McDivitt play on the playground equipment prior to the end of the Head Start school year.

Courtesy Requested at Tribal Offices

Tribal clients and visitors are reminded that when they are seeking services or requesting information at tribal offices, they need to remain courteous to tribal staff at all times.

Recently, there have been several incidents where tribal member clients behaved in a manner that was threatening and abusive. Tribal staff operates under a code of conduct requiring courtesy toward others, and this same code of conduct is expected of tribal member clients.

Anyone failing to conduct themselves in a proper manner may be banned from tribal offices and services until they can comply with this expectation.

We would like to thank the following hard workers for their time and energy in helping to unload the truck. Thank you to Max Hoover and Bruce Yarbour. Thanks to Danny Rilatos and Edd Wilson for keeping their crews on stand-by if needed.

We would like to welcome a new worker, Carol Bloomstrom, on board. She is a very hard worker. We also would like to welcome Kitti back from her training in New York. If anybody has any cool recipes for the hot days, please share them with USDA.

Code Project Prepares Law Enforcement Training Session

Greetings! In the next month, the Tribal Court Code Development (TCCD) project will plan a training on "concurrent jurisdiction" for area law enforcement personnel.

Jurisdiction is the power a government has to enforce the law in a particular geographic area. For example, the tribe has the power to enforce tribal law on the Siletz Reservation. Concurrent jurisdiction occurs when two governments, such as tribal and state, have this power at the same time.

When the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians was restored under the Restoration Act, it became subject to Public Law-280. This federal law gave the state of Oregon (and four other states) the authority to enforce criminal and civil law on most Indian reservations within state borders. Public Law 280 established concurrent jurisdiction on the Siletz Reservation. It does not change the tribe's jurisdiction in any way.

As we prepare to activate our tribal police force, we will assist local police, such as the county sheriff, the Oregon State Police, and others in understanding concurrent jurisdiction.

In addition, the project is hiring the rest of our staff. We look forward to steaming ahead and will keep you informed!
