

PASSAGES

My Fellow People

by Edward Eugene Ehret

*As the Creator's eyes protect us, Many of man's hands tried to wreck us,
But before you,
Is where we stand.*

*You've tried to push us down,
Again and again,
And the only reward is our silly grin.*

*Back on our feet,
We once again stand,
For isn't life truly grand.*

*These pathways through life,
It's such a maze.
It's no wonder so many,
Have lost their ways.*

"Maybe we should let him go, Vince. I mean, a man's got to feed his family. It's not like he was trying to shoot us purely for sport."
