A Native American Business Network

Business LINC

It takes a lot of determination and courage to be a Native American business owner in a non-Indian world. That's why we are here.

ONABEN was created to assist people venturing into the world of business. Since 1993, ONABEN has offered many types of help, such as classes to help Native entrepreneurs take that first step and begin a business of their own.

Now, the newest ONABEN program, Business LINC, can help you grow and succeed.

Whether you are a new business owner, a retired executive who has seen and done it all, or somewhere in between, LINC is for you.

LINC asks business owners to help one another. Each participant makes a commitment to Learning from one another, Investment of time and energy, Networking, and Collaboration with one another.

Through roundtable discussions, group meetings, and conferences, those with experience are able to help those with the drive to learn. We invite you to join us and make this new world yours.

Election

Apparently some confusion has arisen over the number of ballots received by mail at the 2002 Tribal Council election. The number certified, 682, is the actual amount of mail-in ballots received. The number announced before the opening of ballots was incorrect. Upon reconciliation of the ballots, a numbering error was discovered. This discovery necessitated the correction in the number of ballots received by mail. This number is verifiable both by records in possession of the Election Board and by information in the poll book.

I apologize for any confusion this might have caused.
