Re-entry Network Helps with Transition

The Re-entry Network contains important information for families and community members who are concerned about the future of tribal members when they are released from correctional facilities.

The Re-entry Network is an Internet communications system that lets subscribers communicate with all those admitted on the network, which has more than 60 subscribers. The focus of this Oregon Department of Corrections re-entry network is on issues relating to the transition of persons from Oregon's prisons and jails back to their communities and their successful reintegration into their families and neighborhoods.

If you would like to subscribe to The Re-entry Network, go to this link and follow the directions – <http://webhost.osl.state.or.us/mailman/listinfo/reentry-network> or contact Tim Cayton, re-entry chaplain for the Oregon Department of Corrections, at tim.s.cayton@state.or.us.

CRB Seeks Volunteers

Volunteers are needed to serve on the Citizen Review Board (CRB) in Lincoln County. The CRB, which meets in Newport, Ore., is recruiting citizens who are concerned about the welfare of children and families in Oregon.

The CRB is a program of the Oregon Judicial Department and it reviews cases of children in the custody of the Department of Human Services (formerly CSD) and Oregon Youth Authority (OYA). The children are in foster homes, group homes, and residential treatment facilities.

It's especially important that the Lincoln County board have representatives from the Siletz Tribe since many cases of tribal member children are reviewed by the CRB in Lincoln County.

The board reviews the plans for each child, identifies the needs of the children and families, and makes recommendations to the Juvenile Court, DHS, and OYA. The board ensures that children receive adequate services from the state.

The chief justice of the Oregon Supreme Court appoints the board members, who serve two-year terms. Board members agree to participate in 16 hours of training before serving (plus ongoing annual training) and review the case materials before each review. Members participate in fact-finding at the review by interviewing the caseworker, family members, and other interested parties who are invited to attend the review.

The board also develops a summary of the review with findings and recommendations, which is sent to the Juvenile Court and DHS or OYA. All information it handles is confidential. It also makes recommendations to Juvenile Courts, DHS, OYA, and the Legislature concerning services, policies, procedures, and laws that affect children, youth offenders, and families.

The Lincoln County board has two half-day boards that each meet once a month to review cases. One Lincoln board meets on the Wednesday afternoon that precedes the fourth Thursday of each month (this is usually the fourth Wednesday, but not always) and the other board meets on the fourth Thursday morning of the month.

Knowledge of or interest in foster care and child welfare is desired. A board member cannot, however, be an employee of DHS or OYA or any private agency regulated, certified, directed, or licensed by DHS or OYA, nor can a board member be an employee of a Juvenile Court or the Oregon Judicial Department. Members must be either residents of Lincoln County or work in Lincoln County to serve on the Lincoln County CRB.

Anyone interested in serving on the board should call the CRB office in Salem at 503-986-5906; e-mail Ann Hubard at ann.m.hubard@ojd.state.or.us; or write to her at Citizen Review Board, 1163 State Street, Salem, OR 97310.
