

It's Happening at Chinook Winds in May

Free Sunday Concerts by the Sea Continue

Sundays are traditionally a time for lounging and enjoying the day, and what better way to relish the day than with a free concert.

On one Sunday each month, Chinook Winds Casino & Convention Center will present a live concert that's free to the public and open to all ages. All concerts in this series begin at 2 p.m. in the Chinook Winds Convention Center.

Each performance will be from a Western Oregon University musical group of students and staff. To say thanks to the school, Chinook Winds will donate to that group's fund-raising foundation.

The first of the Sunday Concerts by the Sea series was held April 18 with the 20-piece Western Hemisphere Orchestra. The Chinook Winds donation generated from this event will help the band record an end-of-the-year CD.

On May 23, the second Sunday concert will feature the 45-member Western Symphony Orchestra. Winner of this year's concerto competition, this fine group will accompany fantastic student soloists from around the state. The donation from this concert will help cover costs associated with the orchestra's year-end performance.

Before WOU's July and August summer break, the Early Music Consort will appear June 20. This collection of instrumentalists and vocalists will perform music from 16th century Spain, including Diego Ortiz; 17th century Germany, including Heinrich Schutz; and late-17th century Italy, including Archangelo Corelli.

This rare musical group in the Northwest will use its Chinook Winds donation to help purchase a much-needed instrument, a 17th century treble viol, bow, and case.

Plans for next school year's Sunday Concerts by the Sea are already under way. The WOU Chamber Singers, Western Rebellion, and an array of other groups are all eager to display their talents to the community of music lovers and those who just want to relax on a Sunday afternoon.
