2nd Annual Miss Native American Oregon Pageant Includes Young Women from Several Tribes

The second annual Miss Native American Oregon pageant will take place Aug. 21 at 7 p.m. at Chinook Winds Casino Resort.

This important event provides scholarship monies to young ladies who are enrolled members of federally recognized tribes and residents of the state of Oregon. The winner will be eligible to compete for the title of Miss Oregon 2005 in Seaside, Ore., in July 2005, with the ultimate goal of competing for the title of Miss America 2006 in September 2005 in Atlantic City, N.J.

This year, the Coquille Indian Tribe generously donated funds to assist with the pageant and scholarship prize money. The young ladies participating in this year's pageant are members of the Muscogee Creek Nation, Sokaogon Chippewa, Coquille Indian Tribe, Karuk, Athabascan, and Klamath tribes.

In July, the first Miss Native American Oregon, Appolonia Lane of the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians of Oregon, competed in the Miss Oregon Pageant.

Since capturing the 2003 Miss Native American Oregon crown, Appolonia has had a busy year. She has spoken on tobacco prevention (her forum) to local elementary school children, in Boston at the National Conference on Tobacco and Health, and before the W.K. Kellogg Foundation in Minneapolis/St. Paul.

During this time, she also has been studying human services, with a focus on addiction studies, at Chemeketa Community College in Salem, Ore.

Many young women dream of scholarships to help pay for college. Every year, the Miss Oregon Scholarship Program offers to its contestants more than $100,000 in cash and in-kind tuition scholarships.

These scholarships are awarded to any competitor, not just the ultimate titleholder. Scholarships are available for academic achievement, community service, talent, fitness, speaking skills and more.

The 2004 Miss Native American Pageant is free to the public.
