Guitar Virtuoso Roy Clark Shares Country Music Roots

Multi-award winning country legend Roy Clark makes a tour stop at Chinook Winds to perform his hits, including Yesterday When I was Young, Thank God and Greyhound and Malagueña on April 10-11.

In the '70s, Clark symbolized country music in the United States and abroad.
Between guest-hosting for Johnny Carson on The Tonight Show and performing to packed houses in the Soviet Union on a tour that sold out all 18 concerts, he used his musical talent and his entertaining personality to bring country music into homes across the world.

As one of the hosts of TV's Hee Haw along with Buck Owens for more than 20 years, Clark picked and sang and offered country corn to 30 million people weekly.

The son of two amateur musicians, Clark began playing banjo, guitar and mandolin at an early age. By the time he was 14, he was playing guitar behind his father at local dances. Within a few years, Clark had won two National Banjo Championships, with his second win earning him an appearance at the Grand Ole Opry.

Despite his success as a musician, Clark decided to pursue an athletic career, rejecting baseball for boxing. At age 17, he won 15 consecutive fights before deciding he would rather be a musician than a fighter.

While Hee Haw was at the height of its popularity, Clark had a string of country hits that ranged from Top 10 singles like I Never Picked Cotton (1970), Thank God and Greyhound (1970), *The Lawrence Welk-Hee Haw Counter-Revolution

Polka* (1972), Come Live With Me (1973), Somewhere Between Love and Tomorrow (1973), Honeymoon Feelin' (1974) and If I Had It To Do All Over Again (1976) to a multitude of minor hits.

Clark became one of the most recognizable faces in country music, appearing on television commercials and Hee Haw and touring not only the United States but a number of other countries, including a groundbreaking tour to the Soviet Union in 1976.

Show time is 8 p.m. Ticket prices range from $10 to $25.
