"I am inspired by Sam McCracken's leadership and passion for making a difference in the lives of Native children through sport," said Erin Bailey, executive director of CNAY. "Nike N7 represents a positive outlet and brand to many and we are excited about their continued work to support Native youth through the network."

The N7 Fund provides access to cash-only grants to American Indian and Aboriginal communities in support of sports and physical activity programs for youth. Its goal is to help unleash a child's potential through the power of sport.

Nike is inspired by American Indian wisdom of the Seven Generations: In every deliberation we must consider the impact of our decisions on the seventh generation.

Center for Native American Youth is dedicated to improving the health, safety and overall well-being of American Indian youth through communication, policy development and advocacy. Founded by former U.S. Sen. Byron Dorgan in February 2011, the center is a policy program within the Aspen Institute, headquartered in Washington, D.C.

The center works to strengthen and create new connections as well as exchange resources and best practices that address the challenges facing Native youth. Visit the Center's website for a comprehensive list of resources available to young American Indians, Tribes and the general public.
