

Tribal Housing employees among few to achieve national certification

Casey Godwin, Brett Lane and Isaac DeAnda Sr. are enrolled members of the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians and are employed at the Siletz Tribal Housing Department.

On May 9 during the National American Indian Housing Council's (NAIHC) Annual Convention in Denver, Colo., all three employees received the Professional Indian Housing Management certification.

To receive this certification, Godwin, Lane and DeAnda were each required to complete eight courses offered by the NAIHC Leadership Institute, including Indian Housing Management, Financing Affordable Housing Development, Financial Management, Project Management, Supervisory Management, Admissions &

Occupancy, Property Maintenance Management and Environmental Compliance.

Each course ended with a two-hour exam, where participants must score 80% or better to receive credit toward certification.

Since the inception of the NAIHC Leadership Institute, a mere 60 Indian Housing professionals have achieved successful completion of the PIHM training track. Previously, Terry Fisher and Jessica Garcia received the same certification, making it five Siletz Tribal members who have received this prestigious certification.

Well done!
