OSU garden class sign-up still available

Josephine County residents are reminded that there is still space and time to sign up for the 2003 Oregon State University (OSU) Extension Service Master Gardener Program, scheduled to start in early January.

"With the onset of holidays and family gatherings, time tends to slip away," said George Tiger, of OSU Extension. "Therefore, residents are encouraged to not delay and sign up as soon as possible for the Master Gardener Program.

"Besides learning more about gardening, the training program is a great place to meet fellow garden enthusiasts," he said.

Tiger noted that, "Meeting other gardeners from across the area has to be one of the major benefits of the program. Nevertheless, if you are thinking about joining the class now is a good time to sign up. Classes will start Jan. 9.

"The Master Gardener Program," he said, "is intended to give home gardeners basic instruction in horticulture and then to use the trainees to help Extension staff members answer gardening questions from the public."

The course of study will include vegetable garden management, landscaping, plant disease, insects, and management of soil and water. Also lawn and turf maintenance, fruit, nut and berry cultivation, growing herbs, and other related topics.

Classes will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursdays for 12 successive weeks. The classes are to be held at the Extension Auditorium at 215 Ringuette St., Grants Pass. Except for a $65 materials fee, there is no charge for the training, which is provided in exchange for volunteer educational activities.

Cleaning may be hazardous to your health

Brisk winds and fewer daylight hours have hailed the arrival of autumn, and many home owners are doing seasonal cleaning and fix-ups on their homes and yards in advance of winter weather.

Pacific Power wants to remind people working on home repair and cleaning projects to pay close attention to their surroundings and stay out of danger's way.

"Fall tends to bring people outside for one final burst of activity around their homes and yards before the cold weather sets in," said Amy Eschete, Pacific Power's public safety consultant. "We encourage people to stay safe around electricity and take some extra precautions when tackling outdoor repair and clean-up projects."

"The best way to stay safe from electrical hazards is to be alert and aware," Eschete said. "People should keep safety in mind as part of the task at hand. Power lines are put on top of poles and buried underground to help keep our customers away from danger, so

Love is a fruit in season at all times, and within reach of every hand.

(Mother Teresa)

Love your neighbor,

but don't tear down

the fence.

(German Proverb)

plan your work to stay as far away from these as possible."

Pacific Power offers the following safety tips on common home and yard clean-up projects:

*When cleaning roofs and gutters from leaves and other debris, note where power lines connect to the house, and keep ladders, scaffolding and other equipment away. Note the location of overhead electrical wires both while working and when moving equipment when installing, removing, cleaning or repairing gutters.

*If moving, adjusting or installing an antenna or satellite dish on your roof, keep well away from live wires.

*If using electrical tools while mowing, trimming or edging, do so only in dry weather after inspecting the cords and any extension cords. And, do not allow the electrical cords to lay in water. Use a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI) available from most hardware stores. Also, be sure to wear eye and hearing protection while working with and around electrical tools.

*If building a fence or digging a hole for planting, phone 48 hours in advance for utility locating service before digging to be sure not to hit underground power, gas, water, cable or telecommunications lines. If you don't know the number for your area, phone Pacific Power at (888) 221-7070. Contacting underground electric cables can be just as dangerous as contacting overhead lines.

*Check for power lines in or near trees before trimming or pruning branches. Don't use pruning tools or ladders near power lines. Never try to remove a branch that is tangled or lying across a power line. Instead, phone (888)221-7070. "We'll be happy to remove it for you," said Pacific Power.
