March wind blew ill for jobs scene

Five of Oregon's 31 local labor market areas lost jobs in March and 24 gained jobs, a result better than in March 2001 but not as positive as in March 2002.

The biggest losses were in Josephine County (-150) and Hood River County (-130).

Oregon's non-farm payroll employment was up by 1,600 jobs in March, about 4,900 less than normal for the month. Big gainers included Jackson County (+650 jobs), the Salem metro area (+500), Benton County (+490), and the Portland metro area (+300).

Josephine County's employment dropped by 150 jobs overall, while wood product manufacturing lost 200 jobs. Jackson County added 650 jobs in March, mostly in retail trade and leisure and accommodations; this gain was close to normal for the month.

Curry County added 30 jobs last month in leisure and hospitality. Coos County had no change in total jobs in March, while shedding 60 food manufacturing jobs and gaining 70 retail trade jobs.
