

Prostate drug settlement nets $24.9 million for state

Oregon Attorney General Hardy Myers and the National Association of Medicaid Fraud Control Units (NAMFCU) announced an agreement in principle with AstraZeneca Pharmaceuticals LP (Zeneca) to pay $24.9 million to the state Medicaid programs for damages caused by Zeneca's marketing practices for its drug Zoladex. Zoladex has been used for the treatment of prostate cancer.

As part of the settlement, the state of Oregon will recover $184,100 in restitution and penalties for its Medicaid program. The agreement in principle involves all 50 states plus the District of Columbia.

The state settlements were reached in conjunction with a federal settlement negotiated by the United States Attorney's Office in Delaware and a small team of state Medicaid fraud attorneys, including the attorney in charge of Oregon's Medicaid fraud unit.

Pursuant to the agreement, Zeneca has pled guilty in Federal Court to federal criminal charges of conspiracy to violate the Prescription Drug Marketing Act, and also entered a civil settlement to pay damages to Medicare, Medicaid, and other federally-funded health care programs.

As part of the federal settlement, Zeneca will pay the federal government $266 million in Medicare damages, and a substantial criminal fine.

Upon finalization of all settlements, Zeneca's total restitution, fines and penalties to the federal government and the state Medicaid programs will be $354.90 million.
