

Clear air in breeze via haze plan

The Oregon Dept. of Environmental Quality (DEQ) is proposing to adopt a Regional Haze Implementation Plan aimed at reducing air pollution and protecting visibility in 156 wilderness areas and national parks across the country.

Air pollution in the form of haze can travel hundreds of miles and affect the ability to see scenic vistas in national parks and wilderness areas. These areas, known as "Class I" areas, were designated by Congress in 1977 as needing special visibility protection. There are 12 Class I areas in Oregon, including Crater Lake National Park.

The plan is the first step in improving visibility under a federal Regional Haze Rule, adopted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in 1999. This plan contains regional strategies recommended by the Grand Canyon Visibility Transport Commission in 1996, and later incorporated into EPA's Regional Haze Rule.

These strategies primarily focus on improving and protecting the visibility in the Grand Canyon and 15 other Class I areas in the southwestern United States.

"Given the distance from the Southwest, emissions from Oregon, such as forestry/agricultural burning, industrial facilities and motor vehicles, have a relatively small effect on the haze problem in the Southwest," said Brian Finneran, DEQ's visibility coordinator. "As a result, most of the strategies in this plan will have little effect on Oregon sources. A second plan will need to be developed to address regional haze within Oregon by 2008, and at that time we'll be looking at these strategies to see how well they worked in the Southwest."

The recommendations of the Grand Canyon Visibility Transport Commission were the result of a five-year study of regional haze in the Southwest. Earlier this year, DEQ held several informational meetings around the state with stakeholders and the public to review the Regional Haze Rule.

DEQ must submit the Oregon Regional Haze Plan to EPA by Dec. 31. It includes a strategy for stationary sources that establishes voluntary sulfur dioxide emission reductions or "milestones" that must be met collectively by western states each year until 2018. A backup emissions trading program can be triggered if the milestones are not met.

To implement this strategy, two new rules are included in the plan. The first clarifies existing reporting requirements for sulfur dioxide emissions, which will allow DEQ to determine if regional milestones are being met. The second is a proposed rule for the backup emissions trading program.

There will be a public hearing in Medford on Thursday, Nov. 20 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the DEQ Office at 201 W. Main St., Suite 2D.

Comments are due by 5 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 21.
