OSU research will focus on transportation for disabled

Oregon State University (OSU) will use a new $5 million grant from the national Institute for Disability and Rehabilitation to create the nation's first research center focused on making inter-city transportation more accessible.

The funding from this agency of the U.S. Dept. of Education will establish at OCU the National Center for Accessible Transportation (NCAT), with a goal of making travel easier for the 10 percent of the population made up of people with disabilities.

The center will be a partnership between faculty and students in the OSU College of Engineering and the OSU College Health and Human Sciences and involve researchers at Oregon Health and Sciences University and the Stanford Transportation Group, a provider of business-oriented consulting and research to aircraft manufacturers.

"This is an outstanding example of what happens when researchers collaborate across disciplines," said Katharine Hunter-Zaworski, a rehabilitation and transportation engineer in the OSU College of Engineering and director of the new research center.

CJ woman injured in car accident

Gretchen N. Johnson Keim Zeigler, 44, of Cave Junction was in critical condition at Providence Medford Medical Center after crashing her pickup truck into a tree Friday, Nov. 7, at 5:40 p.m. on the Redwood Highway.

Her car was damaged so bad that she was extricated from the vehicle. Oregon State Police said that alcohol may have been a factor.

Volunteer for Citizen Corps

Make your community safer, stronger and a better place to live!

What is "Citizen Corps?"

The Citizen Corps is comprised of residents and businesses who have agreed to play an active role in improving the safety of our community. The Corps volunteers ensure our community is prepared for preventing and handling threats of terrorism, crime, and disasters of all kinds.

Major disasters can overload state and local resources. During the first critical 12 to 72 hours of an event Citizen Corps is extremely valuable. They are well-trained, readily available volunteers who will be able to provide knowledgeable help before and after the arrival of outside help.

Where Can I Volunteer?

- Neighborhood Watch Program:
An expanded program incorporates terrorism prevention & education in an existing crime prevention mission.
- Community Emergency Response Team (CERT):
Certified training program gives individuals emergency preparedness and basic response techniques, enabling them to provide critical support to first-responders during emergencies.
- Volunteers in Police Services (VIPS):
Supports administrative and non-intervention policing activities for law enforcement.

- Medical Reserve Corps:
Currently practicing and retired medical professionals aide the emergency medical response community during large scale emergencies. Volunteers can also support non-emergency public health needs throughout the year.
- Volunteers in Fire Service (VIFS):
Support fire services throughout the county.

Take an active role in crime prevention, risk reduction and emergency preparedness!
